VICTORIA STRECKER watched Friday afternoon as authorities carted off 80 of the dogs and cats she had been keeping in her home. Officials said all but five of the dogs, diseased and hairless from unsanitary conditions and from being kept indoors for as long as a year, would be destroyed.

80 diseased dogs, cats found in suburban house

and JOHN MAES

Victoria Strecker, 65, had been taking stray dogs and cats into her home for years because she didn't have the heart to turn them away. Friday she wept as county rabies-control officers hauled away more than 80 of them to be destroyed.

Animal-welfare and County Rabies Control workers dragged out about 25 cats, which were kept in homemade cages, and about 50 sickly dogs, many without their fur. The animals were loaded into trucks. Allen Glisch, certified investigator for Rabies Control, said he believed that as many as 95 per cent of the animals would have to be "euthanized."

Mrs. Strecker, 65, while standing outside her refuse-filled back stairway at 8600 Ballard Rd., Maine Township, said she had been keeping dogs and cats for about 16 years. She said she took the animals in because she did not "have the heart" to turn them loose. Some people brought them to her and others just abandoned them on her property.

"I couldn't throw them out," she explained. "I haven't got the heart. I'd rather throw a human being out."

She estimated she spent an average of about $150 a month to take care of the dogs and cats and fed them milk and dried and canned food.

When asked why the dogs were in such poor health, she replied that she did not have much time to take care of the animals because she works during the day as a housemaid. She and her daughter live in the home, which is isolated from nearby apartment buildings. She said her house was licensed with the county as an animal shelter.

THE DOGS AND cats were turned over to the rabies-control department and were being inspected. Glisch said many of them were suffering from wretched conditions caused by poor sanitation. He said the dogs were suffering mostly from neglect and that some had worms and other parasites.

Assistant State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, head of the 3rd Municipal District office, said there were some indications that the dogs had been kept in the home for as long as one year.

Glisch said, "The woman did not intend to be cruel. She wouldn't take them to a vet because he would euthanize them. So she made her self-styled animal shelter."

DONALD RUMSFELD

by BOB LAHEY

Donald Rumsfeld defended the economic policies of his President and immediate boss Friday night by describing President Ford's proposed tax cut as the best way out of the economic dilemma facing the country.

The former Northwest suburban Congressman and now close adviser to Ford, said the tax cut is "the most rapid way to stimulate the economy."

Rumsfeld declared that an immediate tax cut would "give the people the choice of how to spend their money."

Rumsfeld dodged a question about recent reports that his successor in the U.S. House, Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, had refused to sign a Republican petition vowing support of President Ford. Questioned about Crane's refusal, Rumsfeld replied, "I do not know the details of the position but from what I read, Phil Crane has his reasons and I thought he explained his reasons in an acceptable manner."

CRANE AND U.S. Rep. Edward J. Dowinski, R-4th, of suburban Flossmoor, were the only two Illinois members of Congress who declined to sign a statement of Republican party solidarity presented by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Rep. John Anderson, R-16th, of Rockford. Crane has said he considered it unnecessary to reaffirm his dedication to GOP principals.

Rumsfeld was billed as the star of the Republican Conference Friday at the Regency Hyatt House near O'Hare International Airport, but other GOP luminaries included Percy, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott, State Comptroller George Lindburg, State Republican Chairman Donald Adams and Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Although Rumsfeld has been portrayed as Ford's closest adviser, he was reluctant to discuss pending issues Friday night. When asked about President Ford's attitude on foreign aid to the failing Cambodian government, Rumsfeld replied he had not discussed the matter with the President.

Treasure hunt? In the river?

If the Des Plaines IS hiding

$40,000, he intends to find it

by LUISA GINETTI

Figure it this way. If Jim Reinecke is right, there's $40,000 in cash hidden in the mud beneath the Des Plaines River.

It's a gamble, but Reinecke thinks he knows where there's a small fortune buried by someone who may have gotten it on payment for an art theft in Chicago perhaps three years ago.

Reinecke, 22, of 1275 Lee St., Des Plaines, believes he found a long-forgotten key to the treasure Friday morning while cleaning out a motel room in the DeVille Motel. And, let's face it — for Jim Reinecke and almost everyone else, $40,000 is worth a gamble.

So, Reinecke and two companions will be digging off the shores of the river in the Forest Preserve east of River Road today at 10 a.m. with the blessing of forest preserve officials, who will be on hand to supervise.

THE KEY IS A LETTER, partially destroyed and browned with age, that describes the location of a buried strongbox that contains $40,000 in small bills. The letter, which included a list of serial numbers for the bills, says the money was payment in connection with the art theft.

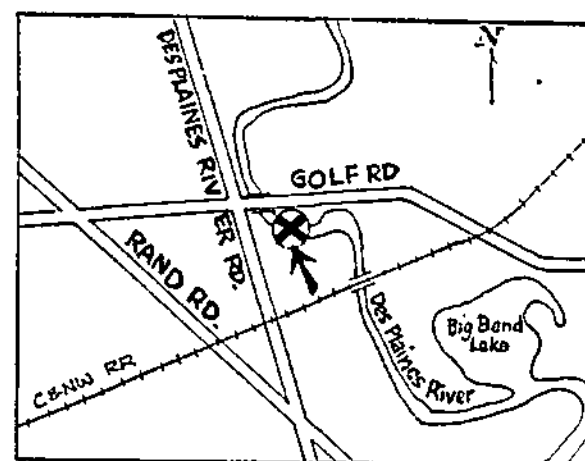

"The top part of the letter was missing, so there was no date on it and I couldn't make out the name at the bottom," Reinecke said. "It caught my attention because of the list of serial numbers on it and it mentioned the location where this guy had buried what sounded like his share of the take."

Reinecke said the letter indicated that the writer had buried the money so he wouldn't be caught with it. "It sounded like the guy was bragging about the case as if he was the mastermind behind it but it didn't mention when the theft took place." He said the name of the Art Institute of Chicago was mentioned in the letter but no specific reference to the date of a possible theft was made.

Reinecke said he burned the letter because he didn't want anyone else to find it. "I have a habit of leaving things around."

He contacted the local FBI office in Des Plaines, where agents said the only recent area art theft they could recall was from a church in Chicago about three years ago.

WHEN REINECKE went to the Des Plaines police to ask their help in locating the money, they said he would have to (Continued on Page 4)

Swinarski pleads guilty to tax charge

State Sen. Donald T. Swinarski, D-Chicago, pleaded guilty Friday to a federal charge of filing a false tax return for 1969. Swinarski has been given federal bodyguards and is reportedly cooperating in an investigation of Chicago and state officials. Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said Swinarski's guilty plea means he forfeits his state Senate seat. U. S. District Court Judge Richard McLaren set April 22 for sentencing.

Library foes won't be there

Mount Prospect Library Board Pres. John Parsons will explain the facts concerning the proposed controversial $3.2 million library to candidates for the village board today, but there's a problem — the candidates leading the fight against the facility won't be there. The library has become an election issue because the funds were approved without a public referendum. The two biggest library opponents, candidates Norma Murawski and Trustee Richard Hendricks are not expected to be at today's meeting.

Grand jury gets sex attack case

Sex attack suspect J. C. Cooley, 24, was bound over to the grand jury Friday on charges he took indecent liberties with a 13-year-old Buffalo Grove girl and the attempted rape of a Mount Prospect woman last year. Buffalo Grove police also said a charge of attempted rape against Cooley in connection with an attack on a second 13-year-old Buffalo Grove girl was changed to kidnapping. A preliminary hearing on the kidnapping charge is set for April 10 in the Skokie branch of Circuit Court. Mount Prospect police had Cooley extradited from Florida in early January. While in this area, he lived at the Lehman Trailer Court, 500 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township, police said.

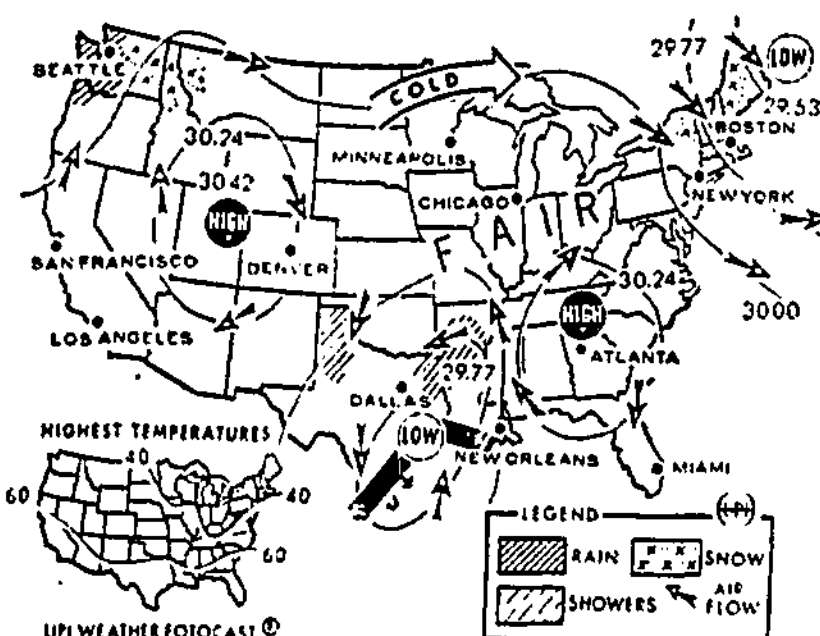

Free advice on golf course

A Palatine golf course architect has offered to give the Elk Grove Park District some free advice on the feasibility of constructing a small nine-hole, par-3 golf course along Salt Creek in Elk Grove Village. The park district is researching the idea of building the course on about 40 acres along the creek. The land is owned by the village and park district. Park officials did not release the name of the architect.

Home ec, shop mandatory

After several weeks of debate Arlington Heights Dist. 25 officials approved a proposal which will make home economics for boys and shop classes for girls mandatory in the district's junior high schools. The new program will go into effect in September and will bring the district in line with new federal guidelines calling for equal educational opportunities regardless of sex.

Select books for County Jail

by JOE SWICKARD

If you don't think the image of librarians is changing, just ask the ones at Rolling Meadows High School.

Elena Hoffmann and her assistant, Esther Perica, have volunteered to help Weird Harold Rubin, the prince of pornography, select books for the County Jail library.

Weird Harold, as he prefers to be called, recently was convicted of selling obscene material. Judge Marvin Aspen sentenced Weird Harold to donate 3,000 books to the jail's library.

Judge Aspen stipulated the books must be of a non-pornographic nature and this is where Miss Hoffmann and Mrs. Perica decided to volunteer their services and experience.

THE HIGH SCHOOL librarians wrote

Weird Harold and Judge Aspen telling them they viewed the selection of the titles as a "professional challenge."

Miss Hoffmann said, "This is a sincere offer. We're really serious about this — getting a good collection for the jail library. This isn't just a fluke."

She said she and Mrs. Perica read of Weird Harold's sentence and thought he might need help in selecting the appropriate books.

Their offer of aid is an "opportunity to provide good literature to those 'less fortunate than yourself,'" they wrote to Weird Harold.

Specifically they could help in choosing "non-sex exploitation books (to) stimulate growth, factual knowledge, literature appreciation, esthetic values and ethical standards."

WEIRD HAROLD, whose calling card is X-rated, said he has not received their letter yet, but promised, "I'll definitely call them." He said he has gotten several offers of donations of books for the jail.

He called the judge's decision "one of the wisest ever made." He observed, "Even if I'd gone to the slammer I wouldn't be looking for a job with IBM when I got out."

Weird Harold estimated the cost of the 3,000 books would come to about $1,000.

One reason for his promised acceptance of the librarians' offer is that the first 1,000 volumes are due at the jail in April.

THE LIBRARIANS, both of whom hold master's degrees in library science, said the selection of the books would present no special problems and their experience in ordering for the high school would be of help to them.

"These books would be for recreational reading. I don't think it would demand a technical or reference collection," Miss Hoffmann said.

"We're interested in pushing books. That's our job," she said.

Principal Robert Hoese said the offer "doesn't shock me. These are two exuberant young women who always are trying to do good."

Hoese also noted that Weird Harold "may not be able to judge" what books should be included in the donations.

When asked if they had ever met Weird Harold or visited his shop at 541 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Miss Hoffmann quickly replied, "No, by heavens, no."

New method ordered for multiplier

The Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs was ordered Friday to use current real estate market values in determining Cook County's 1974 tax multiplier.

The order, by Circuit Court Judge Nathan M. Cohen, could result in tax increases where government bodies such as school districts have been levying taxes at the maximum allowable rate.

Cohen issued the order in a suit brought by two North Shore school districts which had charged the state's decision to freeze the equalizer deprived them of $208,000 in tax revenue last year. Countywide, the freeze is estimated to have cost school districts millions of dollars.

THE MULTIPLIER is needed because Illinois counties assess property at differing percentages of market value. It is supposed to be used to equalize assessments among counties but has been frozen at an illegally low rate in Cook County, the two school districts charged.

Cohen ordered Frank Kirk, director of the local government department, to use "the most current data available" to calculate the multiplier and to make equalized assessments reach the level of 50 per cent of fair market value as required by law.

The 50 per cent level would result in substantial increases in equalized assessed values in Cook County. It would allow school districts taxing at their maximum allowable rates to receive greater revenues.

COHEN SAID the multipliers approved last year by Kirk resulted in equalized assessments varying from 25 to 50 per cent of market value statewide. The state reduced the Cook County multiplier from 1.59 to 1.48 last year when it legally should have been 1.755, the school districts contended.

"If the injunction is not granted... it is contemplated utter chaos will result in Cook County tax collections next year," Cohen said.

He said the order, in a suit filed last year by Evanston Township Dist. 202 and New Trier Township Dist. 203, would not affect a similar injunction issued in January by Chief Judge Harry D. Strouse Jr. of Lake County.

The Illinois Supreme Court will hear arguments Monday on Strouse's order, which resulted from a separate suit filed against Kirk and the local government department in Lake County.

KIRK PREDICTED in testimony last month before Cohen that the state would freeze the multiplier at the current 1.48 level.

"The defendants have threatened the plaintiffs with equalization treatment in violation of the law," Cohen said Friday. "Defendant Kirk testified that Cook County may receive treatment different than that of other counties in the state.

"The only logical rationale," of the multiplier freeze is to prevent Cook County school districts from getting their proper share of school state aid, Cohen said. The state aid is based on local assessment levels.

A legislative subcommittee Thursday recommended that Kirk's department be stripped of its power to set the multiplier and that the target level of assessments be reduced from 50 to 40 per cent of market value.

Auto sales' post-rebate dropoff wasn't as bad as dealers feared

DETROIT (UPI) — Early March new-car sales fell to a 14-year low, but the ending of the $200 to $600 cash rebates didn't have the devastating effect the automakers feared.

Sales of 139,616 cars were 3.4 per cent below last year's energy-depressed level thanks to a strong General Motors performance with a 23 per cent gain. It was GM's best year-to-year comparison since September 1973, when the industry's worst postwar sales slump began.

But even the comparison with the Feb. 21-28 period — the last in which all four U.S. companies were offering rebates — wasn't as bad as expected. Sales in the March 1-10 period were off 40 per cent from the Feb. 21-28 period, the same dropoff experienced in the last five years.

"That's no greater than usual, and I think we have to be very pleased that it wasn't any deeper," one industry analyst said.

GM, WITH SALES of 76,957 cars, was up 23 per cent from last year but down 35 per cent from the final February period.

Ford sold 31,907 cars, off 35 per cent from last year and a 52 per cent drop from last month, and Chrysler sales of 23,458 cars were up nearly 1 per cent over last year but down 35 per cent from February.

American Motors showed a 22 per cent drop from last year and a 37 per cent decline from February with sales of 7,204 cars.

GM, AMC and Chrysler also announced new production plans that will idle another 17,250 workers in the next two weeks.

Begin desegregation in 60 days: court

A federal judge Friday gave the government 60 days to begin enforcing school-desegregation laws in six states and imposed a seven-month limit on all future voluntary school desegregation plans. U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt, in a case affecting mostly southern school districts, told the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare to begin using its desegregation-enforcement powers within two months. School districts failing to comply with desegregation laws could lose federal school funds.

14,000 new Pacers to be recalled

Just two weeks after it put its new small Pacer on sale, American Motors Corp. said Friday it will recall nearly 14,000 of its hottest selling models because of a possible fuel leak in the engine compartment. The defect involves a retainer clip which was improperly installed. This could result in the flexible fuel line being improperly positioned at the fuel pump, possibly allowing it to rub against an engine cross member.

Doctor reports cancer-killing agent

A doctor Friday said combining heat and drugs in treating patients with "black mole" cancer apparently produces an agent that kills rare melanoma cancer cells and possibly other malignancies. Dr. John S. Stehlin said the treatments tripled the survival rates in 30 patients suffering from recurrent melanoma in the arms and legs.

Ex-Oklahoma governor Hall guilty

A federal court jury Friday found Former Oklahoma Gov. David Hall and Dallas financier W. W. "Doc" Taylor guilty on all counts in a bribery-extortion scheme. The silver-haired former governor sat stone-faced as Judge Fred Daugherty read the verdict, reached after three days of deliberations.

A&P to close 1,250 stores

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company plans to close 1,250 A&P food stores over the next 12 months, which is more than one third of the 3,500 in the A&P food chain. For the second consecutive quarter, payment of the regular A&P dividend will be omitted. The company considers this "an essential first step" in the company's announced campaign to reassert its leadership among the nation's food retailers.

Rock Island won't get $30 million loan

The U.S. Railway Assn. late Friday night refused to reverse its decision denying the Rock Island Railroad a $30 million loan the 12-year-old railroad said was essential to stay in business. In denying the loan, which railroad officials said they needed for working capital in 1975, the agency said it found no evidence that the loan could be adequately secured or repaid, nor could it be shown that a smaller loan would prevent the railroad from becoming insolvent.

Israel 'cool' to Egyptian plan

An Israeli spokesman gave a chilly first reaction Friday to Egypt's "concrete ideas" for another pullback by Israeli troops in the occupied Sinai but Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger still hoped to keep the negotiations going with a new Israeli reply. The reaction provoked controversy of its own. A more senior American official said Kissinger himself had heard no criticism of the ideas he brought from Sadat and that there was no Israeli-American split.

Students injure Mexico President

President Luis Echeverria was slightly injured Friday when he was forced to flee Mexico's National University campus as several thousand angry students hurled bricks, bottles and stones. A presidential spokesman first denied, but later admitted, that Echeverria suffered a cut on his forehead when he was struck by what apparently was a stone as he fled the Salvador Allende auditorium where he was shouted down by students who refused to let him speak.

Cambodia, South Vietnam fighting intensifies; U.S. resumes airlift

by United Press International

Heavy fighting was reported in Cambodia and South Vietnam Friday, with the United States resuming its airlift to Phnom Penh after a half-day suspension.

The flights of vital rice, ammunition and fuel from Saigon and Thailand were forced to shut down temporarily Thursday when a rebel rocket hit an ammunition depot at Pochentong Airport and set off a two-hour series of secondary explosions.

Foreign diplomatic missions stepped up preparations for evacuation of their nationals from the capital.

Australia announced it would close its embassy in a few days but retain diplomatic links with the Lon Nol government.

In Bangkok, a RAF Hercules and a French twin-engine Transall turboprop stood by to fly to Phnom Penh and evacuate Australian, French, German, Swiss and Swedish nationals.

In South Vietnam's strategic Central Highlands, the government fought to recapture the overrun provincial capital of Ban Me Thuot in a battle that has assumed massive proportions.

The Saigon command said North Vietnam already has committed 10,000 men in the attack and was moving the reserve 316th division through Laos to join the assault.

The Viet Cong mission in Saigon said the city, stormed by North Vietnamese troops in a surprise attack Monday, was firmly in Communist hands.

The Saigon command, however, said street fighting continued, and field reports said a major and perhaps decisive battle was developing for Ban Me Thuot's airport.

In Phnom Penh, military sources reported heavy fighting on the capital's defense perimeter, where government troops and planes attempted to knock out rebel artillery and rocket positions.

In Paris, the Viet Cong delegation to the defunct Paris peace talks denounced Gen. William C. Westmoreland for urging

New approach sought to get Cambodia aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration leaders worked Friday on a new approach to win congressional approval of a compromise bill providing at least part of President Ford's urgent appeal for $222 million in stopgap military and economic aid to Cambodia.

Some congressional sources said they believe the department is in communication with Sec. of State Henry Kissinger in the Middle East on this issue, and administration sources said the White House believes that a gentler and more flexible stance might change two or three crucial votes on the committee.

But even if the committee reverses itself and reports a bill to the House, there is no real indication it will be passed. The Democratic caucuses of both House and Senate have voted overwhelmingly against the aid request, and although the position is not binding on the membership it exerts a certain amount of pressure to conform to the party position.

The renewed mining and bombing of North Vietnam.

Amount of unsold goods drops

Committee OKs $29.2 billion tax cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee approved a $29.2 billion tax cut bill Friday — including 1974 tax rebates of up to $200 and 1975 tax cuts aimed largely at low- and moderate-income families with children.

The bill also includes business tax cuts including $1 billion in tax rebates to financially troubled companies such as Chrysler, Lockheed and Pan American World Airways.

The sensitive oil-depletion issue was removed from the bill by the committee and will be decided on the Senate floor.

Committee staff members said they would have the final bill and a report ready by Monday night and the bill could reach the Senate floor as early as Tuesday.

Senate Democrats have voted to remain in session until the bill goes to President Ford, even if they have to postpone their March 21 Easter recess.

The bill, as completed in an all-day session, would:

• Grant $8.1 billion in rebates of 1974 taxes, amounting to between $100 and $200 per taxpayer. These would be mailed to taxpayers in May or June. This provision is exactly the same as in the House-passed tax cut bill.

• Provide $16.1 billion in 1975 tax cuts, including reductions in tax rate which could subtract up to $40 a year from tax bills, a 5 per cent tax credit of up to $20,000 for the purchase of homes, direct payments of up to $400 for working poor families with children, and an optional $200 tax credit in place of each personal exemption which would result in tax cuts for those making less than about $20,000 a year.

Treasury Sec. William E. Simon cautioned the Senate against a large tax cut. Simon said the tax bill passed Friday by the Senate Finance Committee, which would double the relief recommended by President Ford, could eventually spur inflation again by creating a bigger budget deficit.

Ford said Congress should stop playing politics and pass an anti-recession tax cut by the end of the month.

In other economic developments, the government said U.S. business made the sharpest reduction in unsold goods in 14 years and provided the first substantial sign that recovery from the recession could begin this summer.

The Commerce Dept. said that for the first time since May 1970, the amount of unsold goods held by businesses declined in January rather than increased.

The reduction of $148 million was the largest cutback since inventories dropped $474 million in March 1961, also a recession year.

It means retailers are selling goods off the shelf rather than ordering new goods. This is a good sign in an economic slump because it indicates businessmen are bringing their inventories in line with sales.

This is a critical step in increasing production and recalling workers laid off in the massive cutbacks in the last five months.

But, economists said, it could take several months for this process to result in reduction of unemployment and, in the meantime, layoffs and production cutbacks will continue.

First National City Bank of New York lowered its prime rate to 7½ per cent, matching the level established last week by San Francisco's Bank of America, the nation's largest.

Industrial production fell 3 per cent in February, the fifth consecutive monthly decline, the Federal Reserve Board said.

LaRue gets 6 months; McCord plea rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Frederick C. LaRue, who was former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell's chief political aide, was ordered Friday to serve six months of a 1 to 3-year prison sentence for his part in the Watergate coverup.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica directed LaRue to be placed on unsupervised probation for two years after serving six months. He was ordered to surrender April 1 to begin serving at an institution designated by the Justice Dept.

Meanwhile, Sirica rejected another attempt by James W. McCord Jr., former Nixon reelection security chief, to avoid going to jail for being a member of the Watergate burglary team.

Sirica denied McCord's request for a hearing on new evidence he allegedly has uncovered. Sirica said any such material should be presented to the Supreme Court, which so far has taken no action on McCord's motion for a review of his whole case.

McCord is scheduled to begin serving a 1 to 5-year sentence Friday.

LaRue refused to speak to reporters after the sentencing, saying he had given no interviews since the Watergate burglary was made public.

LaRue, a wealthy Mississippi oil and land developer, was the first person to plead guilty in the coverup and offered key testimony at the 1973 Senate Watergate hearings and the 1974 coverup trial.

He pleaded guilty June 28, 1973, to one count of conspiracy to obstruct justice. The crime carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

BILL WALTON

FBI questioned Walton, friend in Hearst search

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Professional Basketball player Bill Walton has been questioned by the FBI in connection with Patricia Hearst's Pennsylvania farmhouse hideout, it was disclosed Friday.

It also was reported that Jack Scott, a friend of Walton's who once shared his home, is being sought as the man who rented the secluded farmhouse used by Miss Hearst, 21, and fellow fugitives William and Emily Harris last summer. Scott resigned last year as athletic director at Oberlin (Ohio) College.

The New York Times, which said it was contacted by Scott, quoted Scott as saying: "It's not by accident that no one has been harmed since last June, either the individuals in question or any unrelated parties. You can get medals for killing people, but, if you save lives, some people will call you a criminal."

The FBI questioned Walton at his attorney's office in San Francisco Wednesday but declined to discuss the interview. His attorney, Charles Garry, said Walton was unable to give then any information.

"Bill was cooperative, but he couldn't tell them anything because he doesn't know anything," Garry said.

Meanwhile, the FBI was investigating the possibility that Miss Hearst had fled from Pennsylvania to Las Vegas with the Harrises and Wendy Masako Yoshimura, 29, a new figure in the year-old case whose fingerprints were found with those of the other three in the farmhouse near South Canaan, Pa.

Scott, 32, and his wife, Micki, once lived at Walton's $100,000 home in Portland, Ore., where Walton plays for the Portland Trailblazers of the National Basketball Assn. Garry said Walton told the FBI he had not seen the Scotts for several weeks.

The Long Island newspaper Newsday said Scott was a major subject of a grand jury investigation in Harrisburg, Pa., which was looking into the circumstances of the fugitives' stay in the farmhouse.

"Of particular interest to the FBI is Walton's close friend and roommate, Jack Scott, who California sources close to the case say may have been in touch with Miss Hearst and the others and may now be in her company," Newsday said.

Communication problems cloud Mariner 10's flight

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Mariner 10 is experiencing communications problems and may be unable to function when it makes an unprecedented third sweep past the planet Mercury Sunday, scientists said Friday.

Mission officials at Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the spacecraft is not obeying commands from ground controllers and its tracking system so far has not locked onto the star Canopus.

If Mariner 10 cannot lock onto Canopus by Sunday, officials said, the craft's high gain antenna will not be in the proper position to return television pictures and information from other experiments which scientists had planned for the Mariner's closest approach to the planet — a distance of only 192 miles.

Sunday's encounter with Mercury was to have been the last activity for Mariner 10 which was launched Nov. 3, 1973, and has traveled nearly 950 million miles.

The spacecraft first swept by the planet Venus Feb. 5, 1974, and then made two passes at Mercury at 176-day intervals, taking valuable television pictures and measuring the planet's gravity and magnetic fields.

Mariner's control gas is nearly exhausted and after Sunday's flyby, mission officers will be unable to control the spacecraft, rendering useless future encounters which will occur every six months.

wait until early next week because men and a metal detector would be needed.

Reinecke then decided to start a search on his own for the money so he and two friends, Jim Boveri and Marvin Jahnke rented a raft and went out on the river Friday afternoon.

The three used a wooden pole to probe the river at the point they believe the money to be. Reinecke said the river at that spot is about nine feet deep and should be easy to dig. He said the letter says the strongbox is buried about 2½ feet below the bottom of the river.

Reinecke contacted forest preserve officials to make sure his plans to dig today would not violate any regulations. "They agreed to provide the hip boots, shovels and a squad car to provide us protection when we go out," he said.

REINECKE SAID he and his friends will search the area thoroughly and if they find nothing, he will not pursue the matter.

If he does dig up something Reinecke said he probably will turn the money over to police. "I don't think I'd have any other choice but to give it to them," he said.

He has not ruled out the possibility that he may end up with some type of reward for his efforts and even dreams of the outside chance that he may be allowed to keep the money.

"You can sure take a lot of nice trips to Florida with $40,000," he said.

80 diseased animals found in woman's home 'kennel'

FACING AUTHORITIES, Victoria Strecker tells how she turned her basement into a homemade kennel for stray dogs and cats she "didn't have the heart" to let go. She said she had been taking in animals for 16 years.

Strecker would be criminally charged under the cruelty-to-animals statute, but noted that the details of the case would be submitted to a judge on Monday.

WORKERS COVERED their noses as they led the animals from the stench of manure and urine in the basement. The aroma was similar to ammonia.

County authorities were notified of the situation by a furnace repairman who had come to the home a few days earlier. The state's attorney's office took out a search warrant and entered the Strecker home at about 3:30 p.m.

One of the first men on the scene, Guy Johansen of the rabies-control unit, said "I'd never seen anything like it before. When I came into the basement there were dogs all over the place."

A neighborhood youth, Garry Hallington, 15, of 8894 Knight, said he had ventured near the house a few times in the past, but that he was told to leave or he'd be arrested for trespassing.

GLISCH SAID he had seen worse situations in his 31 years of investigating animal welfare.

Mrs. Strecker said that among her dogs were three chihuahuas and five pedigree dogs. "I don't get no money from nobody," she added when asked if anyone helped her pay for feeding the animals.

She kept the dogs in cages when they were in heat, but purchased birth-control pills from a veterinarian to keep them from breeding, Mrs. Strecker said. A wooden shed in back of the house was heated and often used as a kennel, she added.

She also said she would continue to take in dogs and cats though authorities have taken most of them away. Six healthy dogs were returned to Mrs. Strecker.

She cried as she described how she came home shortly after 3:30 p.m. and authorities already had entered the building to take the dogs out.

Lapham, Branski criticize 'lag in parks development'

Two residents challenging incumbent Buffalo Grove park board commissioners in the April 15 election have rapped the current board for inadequate development of park sites over the last several years.

The candidates, Richard Lapham and Eugene Branski raised the criticism at a candidates' night Thursday at the Kingswood United Methodist Church.

Lapham and Branski are running for two park board seats up for election next month held by Commissioners William J. Kiddle and Eugene Muryn.

"I recognize the value of good recreational facilities," Lapham said, adding some park projects have suffered from what he called "prolonged delay and inferior workmanship."

HE SAID THAT if elected he will work to speed up current and future park projects especially in the Lake County and Mill Creek areas of the village. Several projects, he said, have "lagged beyond reasonable expectations."

"The residents want recreational facilities within reasonable walking distance of their homes," Lapham said.

Branski, who has been active in the Buffalo Grove Recreation Assn. for Boys' baseball said the district does not maintain adequate baseball diamonds for baseball and softball leagues. He also leveled criticism at general poor conditions at all village park sites.

"What I've seen about our park district does not meet with my approval," he said. Park officials have been too easy with contractors and as a commissioner, Branski said he also would push harder for speedy completion of park projects.

"A park is only useful if it can be used by the people of the village," Branski said.

IN RESPONSE to the criticism however, Kiddle said currently 23 per cent of the park district budget goes to park and baseball field maintenance. He defended the board's performance over the last several years noting the number of recreational programs and classes the district conducts for its residents.

"Gene Muryn and I," said Kiddle, "brought this park district from nothing in 1969 to what it is today."

Kiddle also pledged speedy completion of remaining park projects if he and Muryn are reelected. He said the district may then set up another referendum to finance further park developments.

Harvey Foster, 2 Chenault Dr., also a candidate for the park board, did not attend the session.

INCUMBENT Village Clerk Verna Clayton, in a short speech said she has worked to bring "professionalism and efficiency" to the clerk's office.

Running unopposed in the April election, Mrs. Clayton said she is a member of several municipal clerks' organizations and is involved in a three-year program to become a certified municipal clerk.

She said she has tried to make village offices convenient to residents by setting up Saturday morning hours and occasional evening hours at the village hall.

Sex-attack suspect goes to grand jury

Sex-attack suspect J. C. Cooley, 24, was bound over to the grand jury Friday on a charge that he took indecent liberties with a 13-year-old Buffalo Grove girl in an incident last year.

Buffalo Grove police also said a charge of attempted rape against Cooley in connection with an attack on a second 13-year-old Buffalo Grove girl has been changed to the more serious charge of kidnapping. A preliminary hearing on the kidnap charge is set for April 10 in the Skokie branch of Circuit Court before Judge A. Sullivan.

Cooley Feb. 26 also was bound over to the Grand Jury on an attempted-rape charge involving a 22-year-old Mount Prospect woman. Mount Prospect police had Cooley extradited from Florida in early January. While in this area, he lived at the Lehman Trailer Court, 500 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township, police said.

State investigates Orchard fire

Investigation of Sunday's fire, which left as many as 24 families homeless in the Orchard Apartments near Wheeling, has been turned over to the State Fire Marshal's office. Sheriff's police also are investigating the storage room fire.

The fire, at 832 Cider Ln., was the fourth in the complex in 16 months and all four were "similar in nature," Fire Chief Bernie Koepfen said. Sunday's fire was confined to the storage room, but dense smoke affected 8 to 12 apartments and as many as 24 apartments were left without electricity.

The cause of the fire remains undetermined.

Koepfen said a fire of this type is easy to start because of the amount of combustible material found in storage areas. "It is hard to say if it is of suspicious origin or if it was an accident," he added.

Commenting on a similar storage room fire Thursday at the Jefferson Square Apartments in Elk Grove Village, Koepfen said that hopefully future exchanges of information about suspicious fires between fire departments might yield clues to determining the fires' cause. Koepfen indicated there was little way of determining if the Wheeling and Elk Grove Village fires were connected.

To cook with wine: follow instructions, use right wine

Dear Dorothy: You and others keep mentioning wine in cooking. I'm sure there are many like me who have never used wine in food, don't know what kind of wine to buy and even wonder if you can use wine that's been left over. Can't you help the innocents like us?

—Betty O'Dwyer

All one has to do, Betty, is to follow the instructions in the recipes. After following a few recipes you'll become more adept and can experiment on your own. The beauty of using wine is that the alcohol evaporates in the cooking and only the flavor is left in the food. You don't have to buy expensive wines, either. Tell the people in the store you just want a good wine for cooking. They know the score. But do follow the type recommended in the recipes. And, yes, you can refrigerate wine and use it later. Just smell it when you reach for the bottle. If the smell is still good, use it. As the slogan went for a while, try it, you'll like it.

—Mrs. Eugene Quesnel

Dear Dorothy: A friend has a cellar with a dirt floor. There is quite a musty odor. I recall some kind of chemical that can be put on the floor to kill the odor but don't know the name of it. Can you help?

—Cecile Rombauer

I think you mean chlorinated lime (commonly called chloride of lime or bleaching powder). It is sprinkled on the floor, allowed to stay until all the mustiness disappears, then swept up. The odor will also disappear if the area is well heated and dried

Dear Dorothy: Peeling onions did funny things to my skin. I had to come up with something, so started using rubber gloves. No more problems. Thought others might like to know.

—Alice Kress

Dear Dorothy: I'm now 69 but can remember the days when my mother used to do all the baking for our family and used the flour sacks to make our underwear, slips and so forth, trimming them with hand-crocheted edging. The slogan then was, "Waste not; want not." After the empty sack was rinsed out, she would soak it overnight in plain kerosene. Next day the bag was removed and put through the regular wash and rinse process (by hand, too). This always removed any trace of print from the material.

—Mrs. Eugene Quesnel

Tip to brides: If you want to give your Chicken Tetrazzini a bit of class when serving to guests, boil the spaghetti in either chicken broth or add a chicken bouillon cube to the water. Sliced black olives in the finished dish give it still extra oomph.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Newlyweds live in Iowa

The new Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dean Beckman will make their home in Burlington, Iowa, following their marriage Feb. 16 in St. John's Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect.

The bride is the former Diane Lynn Hoyt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Hoyt, 897 S. See Gwun, Mount Prospect. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dale Beckman of Danville, Iowa.

For the candlelight ceremony the bride wore a white satin gown with lace yoke and trim on the full, cuffed sleeves. Her veil also was trimmed with lace, and she carried white and pink roses, ivy and baby's breath.

MRS. MARVIN Vigodi of Rolling Meadows was matron of honor, and Stacey Hoyt, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. The attendants wore blue gowns trimmed with white lace and carried white, pink and blue roses and baby's breath.

Best man was Steve Carden of Burlington, and usher was Roger Baker of Mahomet, Ill.

A reception at Nordic Hills Country Club followed the ceremony. The couple postponed a honeymoon until summer.

The bride was graduated from Forest View High School and attended Drake University in Iowa. The groom is a graduate of Drake and is employed by Briggs Transportation in Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael D. Beckman

A 'Fantasies' garden show

Visitors at the 1975 Chicago Flower and Garden Show being held April 5-13 at McCormick Place will be invited to follow the yellow brick road through the Gardens of Oz and see a storybook full of fanciful gardens and special features. To carry out the theme, "Garden Fantasies," there will be more than 50 gardens supplemented by more than 100 commercial exhibitors.

Even the apartment or windowsill gardener has not been forgotten. House plants, indoor lighting and high-rise horticulture will be displayed. For homeowners there are gardens planned to delight children and adults alike.

For all there will be a picnic woods where visitors may bring their own picnic lunches and sit at rustic picnic tables in a forest preserve setting. Soft drinks and light refreshments will be sold.

Fresh flowers will be for sale as will novelties and gifts. Also, there will be various community groups representing the geographic, cultural, ethnic and economic variety of the Chicago area in demonstration gardens.

AS IN OTHER years the Garden Club of Illinois will hold its standard flower show in conjunction with the show where amateur gardeners and arrangers will exhibit.

The Plum Grove Garden Club, Palatine, will be entered in the table setting competition while Arlington Heights Garden Club, the Garden Club of Mount Prospect and Buffalo Grove Garden Club will be entered in artistic arrangements.

Mrs. Eugene Tamillo, Des Plaines, president of the Garden Club of Illinois, has announced that the show committee will include: Mrs. Paul Mandabach, Barrington, co-chairman; Mrs. Harry Eickenberg, Palatine, artistic classification; Mrs. Dale Stephens, Buffalo Grove Garden Club, junior horticulture; Mrs. Wallace Berth, Buffalo Grove, placement; Mrs. Joseph F. Koenen, Arlington Heights, publicity; Mrs. Dale Schafernak, Palatine, staging; and Mrs. L. E. Capeland, Des Plaines, treasurer.

The state club has chosen "Love" as its theme for this year's show.

Juniors donate $744 to charity

Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club has donated $744 to national, state and local philanthropies for the first half of the current club year.

National and state contributions totaled $414, with donations of $100 each for Brain Research, Cancer Research and the Kidney Foundation. The balance went to Aid for Teachers of Exceptional Children, Project Concern, Care, summer scholarships, forest plantings, veterans hospitals and other Federation philanthropies.

Locally, $100 was given to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (Regional Research Center - Loyola University) and $100 to the Stevenson High School Band toward its trip to Boston in April for the official opening of the nation's Bicentennial. The other $100 purchased original works of art to be donated to Channel 11's auction in April.

Barbara Ann Bell to wed in August

The engagement of Barbara Ann G. Bell to James F. Kane, son of the Arthur F. Kanes, Geneseo, Ill., is announced by her father, Douglas G. Bell, Wheeling.

The couple plans an August wedding.

Barbara, a '69 graduate of Wheeling High School and a '73 graduate of Illinois State University, is an executive secretary with Bell and Gustus, Inc., Chicago. Her fiancé, a '73 graduate of Illinois State, is a second year law student at the University of Illinois College of Law, Champaign.

Gardeners charter buses to Chicago Flower Show

Several area garden clubs and two area park districts are chartering buses for transportation to and from the Chicago Flower and Garden Show, the world's largest indoor flower show.

Those wishing to take advantage of the transportation, which unloads in the mallway adjacent to the entrance of the show, do not have to be members of the local clubs. However, to assure transportation reservations should be made early.

Tickets purchased from garden club members are sold at a reduced rate of $2.50. At the door tickets will be $3.50. Children under 12 will be admitted at the door for $1.50; $1.25 from garden club members.

The show, being held at McCormick Place April 5-13, opens at 11 a.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays. It closes at 10 p.m. each night except Sunday, April 13, when the show is over at 8.

SPONSORING BUSES Saturday, April 5, and Monday, April 7, is Arlington Heights Garden Club. Buses leave Pioneer Park at 9:45 a.m., leaving the show at 3 p.m.

Combined cost for the show ticket and bus is $5.50 although tickets may be purchased separately at $3 for the bus and $2.50 for the show. Taking reservations is Beverly Ray, 398-1432.

A bus chartered by Mount Prospect Garden Club will be leaving St. Mark's Lutheran Church at 9:30 a.m. Monday, April 7, returning from McCormick

Mini Nests For Easter

Make small nest favors for your Easter dinner table. You'll need a package of jelly beans, one-fourth cup butter or margarine, a 7½ oz. jar of marshmallow fluff (or 40 large marshmallows), and 5 cups of rice crispies.

Melt the butter over low heat in a large pan. Stir in the marshmallows until they are melted and smooth. Remove from stove. Stir in cereal.

Drop spoonfuls of the mixture into buttered custard cups or teacups. Press into nest shapes. When firm, put a few jellybeans in each nest.

Which way Methodists?

UMTATA, Transkei, South Africa — In the very same month that Great Britain's Methodist conference voted to continue supporting the World Council of Churches' financing of African terrorists, another Methodist conference met here in Africa.

The Methodist Conference of the North Transvaal designated such church financing of terrorism as ample justification for the Methodist Church to withdraw from the WCC.

This North Transvaal Conference is comprised of 10,000 whites — and 20,000 blacks. One of its clergy, the Rev. Fred Harris, said:

"This is certainly a call for Methodists in Britain to stop making assumptions on the often false and slanted reports fed to them by irresponsible radicals who think they know the mind of the African and are presumptuous enough to think they are speaking for the African masses."

IN THE United States, one of the leading financial supporters of the African terrorists is the National Council of Churches — whose largest financial supporter is the Methodist Church.

But here in Umtata, which in October 1970 will become the capital of the independent nation of Transkei, black Methodist layman Knowledge Guzana, attorney and leader of the opposition in Transkei's Parliament, told this column:

"When South Africa sends its police to defend the borders, those terrorists shoot both the blacks and whites — and they seem to have murdered far more black civilians than white. This is a kind of 'help' we can well do without."

Guzana, who is one of Africa's most eloquent and outspoken anti-segregationists, went on to comment:

"I welcome the change in attitude of your Sen. (Edward M.) Kennedy in his no longer supporting the ill-conceived campaign to withdraw American investments and firms from South Africa. Such action would hurt blacks most and, if anything, make the South African Government more rigid on apartheid."

DESPITE THIS, the United Methodist Board of Global Ministries will this spring carry on just such a campaign, by using its stockholdings to try to pressure such firms as International Business Machines, Standard Oil, International Telephone and Telegraph and Union Carbide.

The U.S. Methodist high command does not want these firms to invest in the only nation in Africa that attracts 50 per cent of all the continent's foreign investments; has never nationalized a foreign company; returns an average of 15-17 per cent on all investments, and is the only government in central or southern Africa that allows more than one political party (save only neighboring Botswana) as well as an unquestionably free press — a sizable segment of which roasts the government daily.

The predominantly white, non-African Methodists object to South Africa's racial segregation policies — which are rapidly changing. Meanwhile, what the non-African Methodist hierarchs are financing is seen in the cartoon, which shows a grinning bishop greeting a black terrorist who is hard at work digging up a road caption:

"Laying a land mine that doesn't kill, but only maims? How clever! After all, we don't want to break the Sixth Commandment, do we?"

It was precisely this type of mentality that motivated a school teacher to place a bomb in the waiting room of the Johannesburg railroad station. He went to the gallows singing "We Shall Overcome."

Miss Countryside Mall pageant registration deadline April 1

Entry deadline for the first annual Miss Countryside Mall Pageant is April 1, said a spokesman for the Countryside Mall Merchants Assn., sponsors of the event.

To be eligible for the pageant, a girl must be between the ages of 17 and 28 by Sept. 1, a high school graduate, single, never married and a U.S. citizen. She can be a professional entertainer.

Contestants must reside in, attend school or be employed in Palatine, Inverness or Arlington Heights.

The pageant will take place Saturday, May 24, at the Countryside Mall in Palatine. Contestants will be competing for scholarships in various categories as well as for the right to represent the area in the Miss Illinois Pageant in July at Aurora. The local pageant is an official Miss America preliminary pageant.

For further information, contact Judy Dotson at 359-9646.

Buffone at Lytton's

Chicago Bears linebacker Doug Buffone will appear at Lytton's in Woodfield today to promote fashions for men.

Buffone will answer questions and sign autographs from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the store.

CORRECTION:

In the advertisement of the Joseph Schneller Furniture Co. appearing in the Pad-dock Herald of March 14, the expiration date of the Thomasville Cash Back Offer should be March 22 instead of April 30 as stated.

Northpoint Easter contest

Northpoint Shopping Center, Rand and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights, is sponsoring an "Easter Bunny" coloring contest for children 5-13.

Posters can be obtained free of charge at any center stores from March 10-22. No purchase is necessary.

Finished entries must be submitted no later than March 23. Judging will take place Saturday, March 29, with prizes of bicycles and radios to be awarded.

For further information, contact Nor-rine Strail at 453-9188.

Give to Dance Marathon

Donations for the 3rd National Dance Marathon, to be at the University of Illinois Champaign/Urbana campus April 11-April 13, are being accepted. The marathon will be sponsored by Zeta Beta Tau fraternity.

Last year 100 couples danced for 52 hours and raised more than $65,000 to fight multiple sclerosis. This year, contributions will benefit the fight against epilepsy and retardation.

Lisa Friedman, a Des Plaines resident and dance marathon cochairman of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority said, "Last year AEPH's couple placed second on campus and sixth nationally. We hope to raise even more money for this cause in 1975."

Donations for the 1975 National Dance Marathon may be sent to Lisa Friedman, c/o Alpha Epsilon Phi Sorority, 904 S. Third St., Champaign, Ill. 61820.

Make checks payable to National Assn. of Retarded Citizens.

Arts exhibitors sought

All high school industrial arts departments in the Northwest suburbs are invited to display works of students in an exhibit sponsored by the Countryside Mall, Northwest Highway and Baldwin Road, Palatine.

Schools interested in exhibiting March 22-23 can obtain further information by contacting Judy Dotson at 359-9646.

You tell your Mr. Butz
'op fiddling with my choice meat!

Meat standards: don't alter them

In about a month, you may get a little less quality in the red meat you buy at your butcher shop or your supermarket, compliments of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Last week the Agriculture Department announced it was approving — despite objections from consumer groups — the "upgrading" of its standards for meat.

What the decision means is that more and more lean beef, some of it from grass-fed cattle, is going to be upgraded to "choice," from the lower classification of "good" — and unless you've read about the change, you may not be aware of the difference when you buy meat.

You'll find that this leaner beef is less juicy, for grass-fed cattle produces leaner beef (the highest grade beef, "prime," is marbled with fat, and that's the tenderest, juiciest and most expensive kind of beef you can purchase).

The result of all this is that cattlemen now can be able to make much more of a profit on their lower-grade, grass-fed beef, for some of it will suddenly have jumped from "good" to "choice," and if there's no reduction in cost for this choice meat, you'll pay for the meat in terms of declining quality.

The move has been termed a "disgrace" by Jane Byrne, Chicago commissioner of consumer sales, weights and measures, and she's considering legal action against the Department of Agriculture for its disregard of the public interest.

We support her action and we suggest there's a simple alternative to the new standards: set up a new category for the leaner, grass-fed beef and allow the consumer to make the choice. Such a move would also encourage the consumer to buy meat economically; this new system seems like a sneaky maneuver to raise prices on meat that we might not want to buy in the first place.

Even though the Department of Agriculture seems to have ignored the cries of consumers on this meat-grading issue, it isn't too late to complain loudly. Perhaps, if we complain loudly enough, the Department will reconsider its damage to our present meat-grading system.

Some fire heroism

The Northwest suburbs Wednesday gained another definition of heroism and neighborliness.

An off-duty fireman, Donald Meyer, and Ernie Ivey helped rescue six of their neighbors from a burning house in Des Plaines.

Five members of the Kurt Schaffert family were trapped on their garage roof, as smoke and flames poured from the windows of their home.

Meyer and Ivey grabbed a ladder and rescued the five from the roof, and Meyer dashed into the house to rescue the family's 77-year-old grandfather.

No one was seriously injured in the fire, and that can be traced to the heroism of both men. We need more like them in the Northwest suburbs.

'Mother's milk story was one-sided'

I would like to comment on an article that appeared in the Wednesday, March 5, edition of The Herald. This particular article appeared on page 2 of section 2 and was entitled, "Mother's Milk Potential Health Hazard: Doctor."

In my opinion, the article was one-sided and did not contain sufficient information to warrant such a broad statement of breast feeding. First of all, the article stated that expectant mothers were researched and not lactating mothers. Expectant mothers produce the fore-runner to human milk, which is known as colostrum. This is a highly concentrated, yellowish liquid which is produced in the latter months of pregnancy and the first few days after birth. This is especially important to the newborn because of its lower fat and carbohydrate content and immunity factors.

It is true that many recent studies on DDT in human milk have been frightening and discouraging. However, I felt that the advantages to mother and baby provided by the nursing relationship should also be given its due attention. Emotionally as well as nutritionally, human milk was intended for human babies, likewise as cow's milk is perfect for calves. Makes sense and it surprises me that more mothers and doctors don't see that. Of course, to nurse or not to nurse is a personal decision for each woman. And this is not to say that a bottle-feeding mother is not a good one.

But I do feel that such articles as the one that appeared are unnecessarily biased against a womanly and loving, mother-baby relationship.

One final point was discussed in the ICEA News (from the International Childbirth Education Assn.). This article points out the dangers of the alternatives to breast feeding — the high strontium —90 content of cow's milk (and the formulas made from cow's milk) as well as the many threatening additives and contaminants — including DDT — contained in commercial baby foods, routinely given very early in life to bottle-fed babies.

As always, The Herald is a wonderful and informative newspaper and I was happy that the opportunity is given to those who wish to voice their own opinions. In this particular instance, I would like to see some equal time given to the elimination of DDT from environmental areas which undoubtedly find their way in to everyone's diet, not just the nursing mother. And, in my opinion, the advantages of breast feeding far outweigh that of the formula route.

She sees good in local teenagers

Tonight I attended a performance of "My Sweet Lord" presented by local area teenagers at Bethel Lutheran Church. I must say I have never been more moved at the presentation of God's word in this manner. They presented their program with such realism and feeling with the music of today. If any of our local area residents have seen "Godspell," "Jesus Christ Superstar" and enjoyed it, by all means make a point to see "My Sweet Lord" which is a combination of "Godspell," "Jesus Christ Superstar" and other words and music written by Craig Gishlin, a senior at Rolling Meadows High School, and the other young people performing. They not only inspire you with their belief, but they are an extremely talented group of young people.

So many times I've been tempted to write such a letter to the editor about our young people and never did. Tonight I felt compelled to share this experience and I also felt I had to finally take this opportunity to praise our young people of today. Too many times we only read the bad about our youth. Well, let it be known that the majority of the young people are fine human beings with good heads on their shoulders and a lot going for them.

We've been selling them short and it is time we recognized the good in them. They are something to be proud of and I congratulate the performers of "My Sweet Lord" for a job well done and all of our fine young people of today.

Wheeling candidates backed

I would like to take this opportunity to point out the many erroneous innuendos and accusations made by Jeanne Eaton in her letter concerning the Wheeling Community Party (COM-PARE) candidates.

Mrs. Eaton comments that the candidates cited "voter apathy" for the turnout at their first "comparability session." First, The Herald article did not involve the first session but the second. Secondly, the "voter apathy" comment was The Herald's, not the candidates.

Several other errors should be corrected for the record:

Trustees Koepfen, Lang, and Berger have stated time and again that they were unaware of the shakedowns that took place. Illegal activities do not take place as a matter of public record. They take place out of the limelight, with the participants attempting to completely conceal their activities. I would find it absolutely amazing if the three incumbents were aware of the illegal activities and escaped notice of the extremely thorough investigations conducted by the U.S. Attorney and the FBI.

What then, in fact, have these three trustees done to correct what is or might be wrong in the village? First, and most obvious, was their support of bringing a consulting firm into the village to review the operations and administration of the village hall. Also, Trustee Koepfen fostered a series of accountability sessions throughout the village to answer questions and solve problems. Trustee Lang authored and sponsored an ordinance creating an employee appeal board to remove political hirings and firings. All three insisted that the right of citizens to address the village board be placed in ordinance form — even when the village attorney advised it was not necessary.

All of these accomplishments and many others are a matter of public record. Any attempt to link these gentlemen with scandal — when the record clearly shows them not involved — is an insult to the intelligence of those voters who take the time to read the public record.

It should also be noted that Mr. Rogers was approached by each of the other political parties before choosing to run as part of the Community Party. Mr. Rogers' record of community service afforded him a good opportunity to choose his running mates and he therefore chose the Community Party because of the honesty, integrity, community involvement and dedication of Trustees Koepfen, Lang, and Berger.

I would, finally, like to point out that there are several "comparability sessions" remaining. If Mrs. Eaton would like to raise her questions openly, in a public meeting, I am sure the candidates of the Community Party will be happy to answer them fully.

Her fitness program turns into 'rump walk'

This is President Ford's physical fitness season.

It's also a trying time for me because my daughter is a physical education teacher and she keeps trying to get me to participate and I keep trying to avoid it.

The last time I was into an exercise regimen was when I read that sensible daily calisthenics could add years to my life. However, I flunked the pre-program testing routine which determined how much exertion I could tolerate, and I then reasoned that if a pre-program test left me breathless, dizzy and in great pain, the real thing would probably kill me. Which obviously would not add year one to my life, so I quit exercising.

This logic does not now impress my daughter, who states, "I was in college when you first tried exercising. Mother, but this time I am here with you. Having learned all about physical education even as it applies to old ones like you, I will now help you."

The first thing Marilyn decreed was a few sit-ups, which she demonstrated in such a way as to make it look easy. When I tried it, my feet went up in the air but nothing else moved. "Hook your feet under the sofa until you get the hang of it," Marilyn said. There, she added, "You are supposed to bring yourself to an upright position, not the sofa." With a burst of Herculean effort I raised to a half-upright position, then fell back with a cry of pain.

"Good," said Marilyn, "pain is an indication that your muscles needed that particular movement. Now, keep your back straight and try it again."

I had not heard anyone so enthusiastic about someone else's agony since the last time I was in labor. I cried, "Sadist! Even I know that someone with a suspected back injury should not be moved, I will just lie here quietly while you summon the paramedics."

Although Marilyn did not call the paramedics, she did condescend to let me try a less rigorous exercise. It involved assuming a combination guru-yoga position which is handy if you wish to inspect your big toes at close range. Before she could show me the next movement, I tipped over. She righted me only to see me tip over a second time, then a third, fourth and fifth time.

"Hmmm," she said, "your gluteus maximus seems to be so round that we will have to do the rump walk to flatten your fanny so that you do not keep tipping over in that ludicrous fashion."

"Ludicrous, schuderous, let me up." I cried, but the next thing I knew I was doing the rump walk.

To accomplish the rump walk you must sit on the floor with your legs straight out in front of you. You then propel yourself forward in a manner designed to erode your gluteus maximus and pick up any stray Christmas tree needles imbedded in the carpeting.

I initiated the final exercise — I exercised my parental right to cut the kid out of my will if she didn't leave me alone.

Hits street lights

Do we want Palatine to look like this? Two of the most dismal, ugliest stretches of road anywhere in the Chicago area can be found along the Stevenson just outside Chicago and off the expressway around Gary.

In both of these areas the bright, ugly, yellowish street lights can be found. We'll leave to the ecologists and agriculturalists what the destructive effects of sodium vapor lights would be to local flora and fauna. They would be (and in Arlington Heights apparently are) totally unacceptable to homeowners and residents even as a downtown decoration. Perhaps the public official who is sponsoring this idea should spend a little time improving the community and not dive into even a "test" uglification program.

The residents around the Winston Drive-Palatine Road intersection, Northview Subdivision, and downtown Palatine area would be guinea pigs to satisfy a curiosity which could better be satisfied in talking with the Arlington Heights Village Board and affected residents. Why is it politically satisfactory or appropriate to "re-invent the wheel."

Mr. Anton H. Harwig, talk to your friends and neighbors. Do they need high light intensity 24 hours a day? Do they want dismal, ugly lighting? Do they want plant life problems? Do they need public officials who make these kind of proposals without weighing all the considerations? I doubt it.

Chavez supported

We are often asked if, in view of the seemingly insurmountable collusion of powerful growers, such as Gallo and the Teamsters union, Cesar Chavez and the cause of the United Farmworkers are dead? In answer to one such pessimistic assessment by New York Times reporter Winthrop Griffith recently, UFW legal counsel Jerry Cohen responded with the following simple analysis, "Winthrop Griffith and a lot of observer-type folks like him are not writing about Cesar and the farm workers at all. They are writing about themselves; they are simply announcing that the 60's tired them out and they want a rest from the conscience-probing struggles laid on them by the farm workers and other poor people of the world."

Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers are not worn out, even though they have more reason than most. They do not intend to stop their organizing efforts until they have built one democratic union of all farm workers in our nation. As National Farm Workers Ministry director Rev. Chris Hartmire says, "The United Farm Workers are alive and well, and that is good for all of us."

The news of the march to Modesto, the home of all Gallo wines, by 10,000 farm worker supporters, and the success of the grape and iceberg lettuce boycotts, make it appear that 1975 may well go down in history as the year America's most trod upon citizens are freed from bondage.

I and the others in the North West Suburban Farm Workers support group will be working to bring you, our neighbors, the issues, and how you can help to end the "harvest of shame." As consumers it is our responsibility.

Look! Up in the sky...

Researchers expect the number of UFO 'sightings' to increase —but this time, they feel, many more will be believed

by STEVE BROWN

It is almost that time of year again. The season when the dull days of winter gave way to spring and people pull back their shutters and begin spotting lights moving across the sky.

The UFO season is almost upon us, but this time something a little different might be happening, say people like Sherman Larsen and Robert Runser of the Center for Studies.

That little difference is that these two men and their colleagues at the center believe UFOlogy has gone legit.

Together with men like Northwestern University professor J. Allen Hynek, a long-time UFO researcher, and a small core of investigators, the men are trying to bring the study of UFO's out of the dark ages.

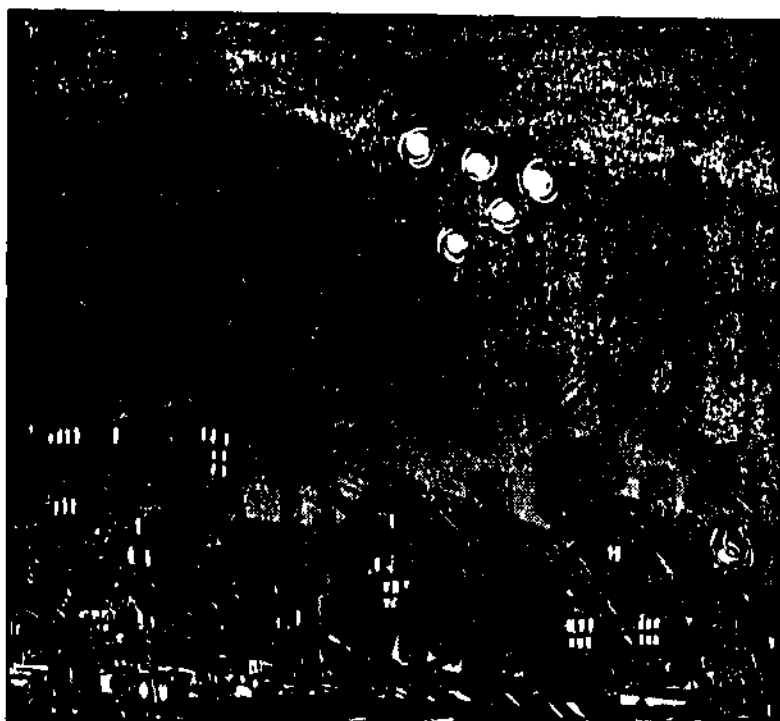

LARSEN AND RUNSER are putting the message out to groups like the Borg-Warner Research Center Chapter of Sigma Xi, a scientific research society.

"There is so much that we don't know," Larsen told a crowd of about 200 persons Thursday night. The group, which was about four times the size of normal Sigma Xi gatherings, sat for more than two hours listening to what the government, most notably the Air Force, has not done about UFO's and what the center has in mind.

After the speech, Larsen said the group would like to be able to collect enough data so that a statistical model can be developed to help them predict the most likely time and location of a UFO sighting.

With that type of information, trained observers could be used to examine what might occur.

RUNSER WARNED up the crowd for Larsen's pitch about the center by reciting the results of 20 years of studies conducted by the government, which concluded that there was no such thing as a UFO.

He said the conclusion was reached even though the statistical information in one report concluded that more than 30 per cent of the sightings reported under what was termed excellent conditions remained unexplained.

"The Air Force tried to suppress reports and the press used what information that was available to label people who were studying UFO's as kooks," Runser said.

"The whole thing turned off the scientific community," he added.

But the two men stated that when Hynek got involved in 1972 with the center, scientists began to respond and show an interest in the serious study of UFOs.

SINCE 1972, the project has begun to roll. It now receives reports from the Smithsonian Institute's short-term phenomena center and recently the FBI Bulletin published an article outlining the scope of the program suggesting that law-enforcement agencies across the nation begin reporting their UFO sightings to the center.

"It seems that now everybody wants to get involved," Larsen said.

A computer program is now being used that has reports of more than 45,000 UFO center's efforts. More information is coming in daily. French space program officials are offering data they have collected on UFOs.

Runser said that he believes the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will be providing information in the near future.

BUT BESIDES the data, Larsen said the center needs money.

"We are not interested in government funds, we are seeking private contributions, foundation grants and corporate donations.

He estimated the center eventually will need more than 10 times the current budget of $20,000 to carry out its work annually.

The funds and the necessary information might not be far off. Larsen said the center is receiving about four reports a night on UFO sightings. He added that in April the Federal Aviation Administration will order air traffic controllers to begin responding to inquiries from the center concerning UFOs.

And as the word of the work spreads, more funds might come. A recently released Gallup poll showed 15 million persons said they had seen an UFO, more than three times that number questioned in a 1966 survey.

The center is not ruling out little green men, but they are saying right now they need much more information before a firm answer is developed.

Second half power carries Maine South past Prospect

by MIKE KLEIN
Maine South's running Hawks, who are known to slow down considerably under sectional pressure, haven't fulfilled two of their seasonal goals. At least, that's according to senior forward Mike Chrzan.

"We wanted to win our Christmas tournament but lost the overtime game to East Leyden at East Aurora," Chrzan explained Friday evening after a quick shower in the dungeons of Arlington's Grace gymnasium.

"And we wanted to win our (Central Suburban) conference, but Niles West beat us to force a tie."

Don't shed any tears for the Hawks, though.

Listen along to Chrzan: "But our big goal all along has been to get downstate and win the state championship."

In that respect, Chrzan and mates are still in the running. Literally!

White hot on the defensive boards and with their fast break unstoppable, the Hawks rose from a 26-22 halftime lead and blistered Mid-Suburban League champion Prospect, 70-56, with second half power in the finals of the Arlington Sectional.

Prospect's greatest downfall was 26 per cent field goal shooting. Senior guards Mike Quade (3-of-15) and Al Black (4-of-20) picked the wrong night for 20 per cent combined shooting.

Maine, which shot 27-of-59 and pounded

Prospect on the boards (40-19), gained a spot in next Tuesday afternoon's Super-sectional at Northwestern University. The Hawks now draw Waukegan, a 69-56 winner last evening over Crystal Lake. One of three Maine losses came at Waukegan. They've won 23.

It will be Maine's second trip to Supers. South lost to Joliet Central in 1970 under former coach Bernie Braty. Winners of 11 consecutive regional titles but just 2-of-7 sectional finals, they'd been criticized for late season chokes.

"We don't think about that," said Chrzan who helped Maine to a 22-11 third quarter which left the Hawks ahead, 48-33.

"People who've been through it before . . . it might bother them. Maybe you should talk to the other guys, too, but this is a whole new team."

Chrzan staggered through 0-of-31 shooting during two Arlington sectional games. He made just 3-of-17 against Prospect. But they came moments into the third quarter and put Maine on top, 32-24.

Prospect's Dave Mann, who was 3-of-11 shooting, dropped a field goal at 7:44, third period, that drew the Knights within two points at 26-24. Then Chrzan made his move.

Within one minute, Chrzan sank a right baseline jumper, tipped in Joe Pagone's missed shot and swished a 25-footer from the left wing. He finished with seven points.

Hawk center John Kuntz and guard Ted Henderson scored 19 apiece for game honors. Pagone, in a much improved showing over Tuesday's win against Evanston, hit 14 points, ran the fast break superbly and shuffled off numerous assist passes.

"Sure Pagone might make quite a few turnovers (five during the first half), but there are some things he adds, too," said Prospect coach Bill Slayton. "He's Arnold All-Guts out there."

Chrzan's three field goals, plus his team leading dozen rebounds (eight defensively) got the Hawks running. Here's how Prospect guard Quade saw the action:

"They started running and got the ball out to him (Pagone) on a three-and-two. You should score every time. He handled the ball well. You normally want to put pressure on, but with our big kids we can't press," explained Quade.

Henderson scored five fast break field goals during three minutes that spanned the last two quarters. All were from assist passes by Chrzan and Pagone. Kuntz scored 11 points after intermission and was tough to slow down.

Maine South dominated Prospect inside. Knight center Paul Withey, the game's tallest player at 6-9, was limited to one field goal in two tries but did add nine free throws.

Maine's largest advantage was 58-35 at 5:22, final period. The Hawks never employed full or halfcourt pressure. And neither did Prospect. Here's why:

"We came out in a diamond-and-one with Dave (Black) chasing Pete Boesen," said Quade. "If the guards can't take pressure but you're not able to press, then you have to determine their next weakness."

(Boesen, an All-Stater, was contained at eight points and nine rebounds.)

"Boesen and Kuntz are strong inside," said Quade. "We wanted to stay close to Boesen, clog the middle and maybe leave their guards alone. Not completely, of course, but concentrate down low."

"We thought for sure we could run with them. No doubt in my mind," Quade continued. "But the way they run really burned us. Bang, they'd get the board and they're gone."

Boesen fouled out. Prospect's 6-8 forward Doug Bonthron had four personals at the break and watched most of the middle quarters. That undoubtedly hurt, but when you're shooting 26 per cent, things are tough all over.

EASY DOES IT. Prospect's Ted Reynolds, who came off the bench Friday night when starter Doug Bonthron was plagued with fouls, delivers a short jump shot over the outstretched arm of Maine South's John Kuntz. Maine South had 44 points in the second half of a 70-56 victory.

No excuses...just praise for a fine tourney champ

by KEITH REINHARD
The locker room was not especially quiet.

Various people dropped by to offer consolation . . . and congratulations on a season well played.

Players and managers milled through the aisles on various missions. Several reporters singled in to talk to the head coach.

The atmosphere might have been a little more hushed, the air hanging a little gloomier, had the decision been a narrow one . . . they're the real tough ones to accept.

But there was no question about the verdict at Arlington Friday night and it had been totally accepted in this, the Prospect locker room. They had just absorbed a 70-56 setback at the hands of Maine South in the sectional finals and their 1974-75 season had come to an end.

"We lost to a good club, no question about it," head man Bill Slayton was saying to the gathered reporters. "They killed us on the boards, did a real nice job out front, and played some tremendous defense . . . they forced us into taking an awful lot of shots that we shouldn't have."

Someone asked him about the job his own kids had done on all-stater Pete Boesen, the 6-8 Hawk whiz who had carried a 25-point scoring average out on the court and left early with five fouls and only eight points. Slayton touched on the subject philosophically though.

"I guess it's evident tonight that they're more than a one-man team. Sure we did a great job on Boesen but I kinda feel they were destined to score 70 points either way . . . with him getting 35 and the rest of the team 35 or him eight and the rest of the team 62."

The Knight pilot didn't want to play down from his own club's efforts however . . . on this night or any other night over their 25-game campaign.

"I'm not embarrassed about any of our losses this year," he said. "We've lost to this club twice now and once each to Evanston, LaGrange and Belleville East . . . all good ball clubs."

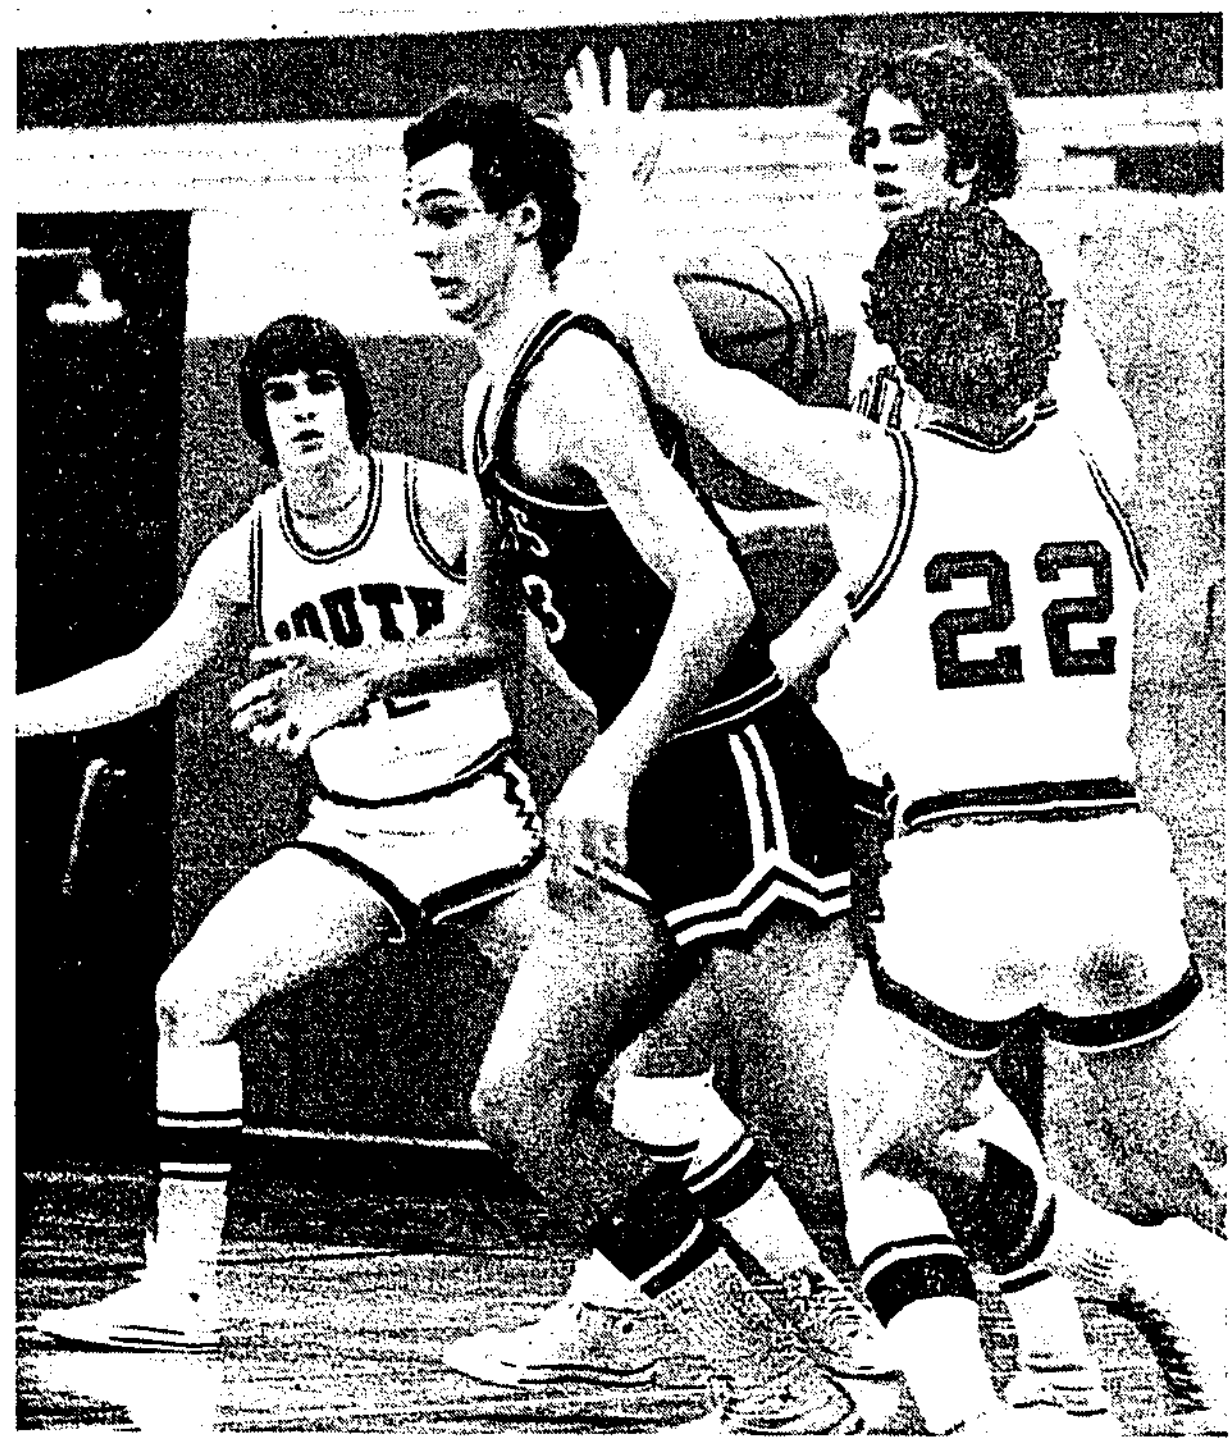

Some of the people were beginning to leave now, and perhaps the locker room was growing quieter. A season was over, and for the most part, another era was concluded for Prospect basketball. This was primarily a senior group who will now graduate and go on to other things.

And in the growing stillness Slayton offered a final tribute to them and their place among past Knight teams . . . teams which have been winners 16 out of 17 years.

"Yes, we lost tonight, but it shouldn't detract from a bunch of kids who were great to coach and did an excellent job all season. The school has had some super teams over the years, but this group could match up to the best of them."

The HERALD

OH WOEE! This Buda cheerleader suffers as her team's perfect season ends with an opening loss to Watseka at the Class A tourney Friday.

Watsaka tops Buda

The Illinois Class A quarterfinals saw the only undefeated team in the eight-team field knocked out Friday at Champaign's Assembly Hall. Buda Western, unchecked through 29 games, dropped from contention in the afternoon round, losing to Watseka, 63-57.

In other afternoon action, Venice advanced to the final four with a 47-41 victory over Morrisonville. Friday night saw Eldorado stage a comeback to topple Chatham Glenwood, 65-60. The final night contest had Timothy Christian defeating Port Byron Riverdale, 48-18.

Watsaka's Lyndon Swanson, a burly (6-foot-8, 220) center, led his team past Buda with 17 points and plenty of clutch rebounds. The Warriors (24-7) will face Venice in today's first game, beginning at noon on Channel 9. The Red Devils of Venice, ranked second in the state, were led by Reggie Gardner's 23 points. Gardner was the hero in the supersectional earlier this week, hitting a 35-footer at the buzzer to nip Carmi, 58-57.

Eldorado's Greg King helped his team overcome a 14-point second quarter deficit, outscoring the Chatham Glenwood 22-3 during one flurry. King finished with 20 points. Eldorado (23-8) will take on Timothy Christian (26-5) in the second afternoon contest. The Christian team blanked Port Byron Riverdale in the fourth quarter and only gave up six in this third quarter. The game was tied 12-12 at halftime.

Walker paces Bulls past Pistons

Veteran Chet Walker scored the Chicago Bulls' last seven points Friday night to help stave off the Detroit Pistons and preserve a 97-94 National Basketball Association victory, only the second win in 10 games for the Midwest Division leaders. With the score tied 86-88 late in the fourth quarter, Chicago's Matt Guckas hit a 22-foot jump shot to put the Bulls on top and he followed up with a driving layup to make it 90-88. Detroit's John Mengelt sank two free throws to close the gap to 90-88. Then Walker began his surge with jump shots of 22and 16 feet to give Chicago a 94-88 lead with 1:16 remaining.

Kareem wants out of Milwaukee

The Milwaukee Bucks will almost certainly be without the services of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar next season, several sources said Friday.

Abdul-Jabbar, told that Bucks President William Alverson said his star center had asked to be traded, said, "He really said that, huh?"

"That's very interesting," the two-time NBA Most Valuable Player said, "I haven't asked to be traded just once. It's been more than several times."

And in other sports news . . .

. . . The NCAA basketball tournament gets underway today at eight different sites with a field of 32 teams fighting for the crown that North Carolina State won last year . . . Detroit Piston center Bob Lanier was assured by doctors that although his recently mended knee may give him pain there is no way he can injure it further playing basketball .

Weather keys Lake Michigan run

Smelt enter starting blocks

The annual race to Lake Michigan will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 1. At this time, a confluence of sprinting fishermen and running smelt hopefully will break the tape at the same time. From all indications, Illinois Department of Conservation (IDC) officials are anticipating a very productive smelt fishing season along Chicago's lakefront.

The plain truth, though, is that the 1975 campaign can't help but be more successful than 1974. At the height of last year's "run" the fishing, at best, was sporadic.

"Last spring was one of the wettest we've ever had," IDC spokesman Marc Tuttle explained. "I'm not saying that a lot of rain is bad for smelt fishing, but the air last year was cold at the same time making for unbearable fishing conditions."

The key to the season is warm weather. The smelt seek tepid water for their spawning runs and if the temperature climbs into the "balmy" range, fishermen may be in business.

To expedite the warming of Lake Michigan water, mild rains prove to be very advantageous. Most fruitful outings on the Lake Michigan breakwater last season came during a drizzle.

The 1975 smelt season is scheduled to open April 1 and continue through Sunday, May 11, according to Edmund Kelly, Chicago Park District general superintendent.

But Kelly quickly adds that if the weather turns unseasonably warm causing the fish to run inshore earlier than usual, "arrangements will be made to open the season accordingly."

The actual smelt spawning run normally lasts little more than a week or possibly 10 days. Prior to and after the peak action, the numbers tail off dramatically.

But for cheap entertainment, a family outing or the intimate camaraderie that can't be found in a boat, smelt fishing stands alone.

The essential equipment — a new Illinois fishing license (the old ones expire March 31, 1975), a five-eighths or three-quarter inch mesh gill net, trolley line, anchor, light or lantern and a bucket to dump your catch in — is all that is required.

Total outfitting shouldn't exceed $12-$15. Just toss in a little luck, a little timing and some warm weather and you're ready to join in a fast and furious evening of action.

Smelt fishing along the Chicago shoreline is restricted to the period between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. during the season. Angling apparatus must be portable (capable of being erected and dismantled within a 24-hour period) and must not require the drilling of holes.

Once the net is lowered into the water, it's just a matter of time before the 5-to-8 inch smelt swim into the mesh, causing the net to catch behind their gills.

At the summit of the smelt run, the heavy nets are shining like Christmas trees under the weight of 50-100 silver smelt.

Fishermen must conform to the rules and regulations of both the IDC and the Chicago Park District. Among the ones most rigorously enforced will be those prohibiting the building of fires or shelters or the use of more than one smelt net per person.

Also illegal upon park district property is the consumption of alcoholic beverages or the selling of fish.

Veteran fishermen probably have their favorite spots on the lakefront, but by and large, all points of access to the lake are productive.

The smelt movement is from south to north, so the activity should blossom initially at 102nd street and slowly advance to 95th, 90th, 85th, 80th, Navy Pier, Burnham Harbor and then up to North Ave., Belmont, Montrose, Foster Ave., and finally up through Wilmette to Waukegan.

The smaller smelt in the 4-6 inch range, are the most desirable. When decapitated, cleaned and french fried like shrimp or chicken, the bones in the smaller, tastier smelt become edible.

So let the annual race begin and hope that the opposition shows up.

Largemouth bass log miles

Radio-tracked largemouth bass are proving to be travelers in Lake Sangre de Cristo, 10 miles southeast of Springfield.

Illinois Natural History Survey technicians electro-shocked a dozen of the fish and surgically implanted radio tracking devices in them, then released them at a half dozen locations in the man-made power company impoundment.

The study on tracking bass is to determine effects of the hot water discharge on fish populations, and is part of a larger program to determine water quality, pesticides, trace metals, sediments and other factors that make a hot water impoundment different from a normal lake.

The overall four-year program is being financed by grant from Commonwealth Edison Power Co., builder of the lake, which uses the water to cool its generators. Comm-Ed has turned over the property surrounding the lake to the Department of Conservation for use as a state park.

The research is being done by Dr. John Tranquilli, Dr. Weldon Larimore and William Cochran, fisheries specialists of the Natural History Survey.

"In unheated lakes, largemouth bass generally stay in one place if their needs are satisfied," said Dr. Tranquilli. "However, we are finding that bass migrate readily in Lake Sangre, searching for temperatures that are to their preference."

The bass are tracked three days a week and their locations marked. During summer months they disperse into the coldwater arms of the lake, and in colder months they move in the direction of the hot water discharge arm.

One bass has proven to be an extensive traveler, logging more than 31 miles since the study began last spring, while most of the other bass have moved shorter distances, always traveling toward optimum water temperatures.

Eight of the 12 research are still active at Lake Sangre. Two have died and been recovered. Two either have radios which are now inoperable or are in depths too deep to track. Ice in the coldwater arms of the lake has hindered winter tracking to some extent, but the fish are tracked when weather permits.

This year the biologists will implant new radios into their research fish, equipped with devices so they may also record the water temperature as they track the bass' migrations.

The team has also shocked and tagged more than 1,000 largemouth bass, of which over 35 per cent have already been recovered through angler catches or reshooking. This is also designed to provide information on how far the fish in the lake are moving.

Also, the size of the lake can spell trouble for the small boat owner not familiar with its unpredictable moods.

By booking a charter well in advance for the peak fishing seasons, the visitor practically is guaranteed he will catch fish.

Salmon fishing on the lake is a relaxing sport. On a charter boat, the captain and crew do all of the work, rigging lines and selecting fishing spots. Once the lures are in the water, the fisherman sits back and waits for the strike.

But don't be fooled by the nature of the sport. Once the fish strikes, its up to the angler to bring him to the boat.

If it happens to be a 30-pound salmon, the battle is far from won.

Charter boat captains eye salmon feast

Dreaming of doing battle with a 30-pound salmon or lunker lake trout?

Some 40 million people have such fishing readily available, but most are passing it by.

In 10 short years, Lake Michigan has grown from a 307-mile-long fishing desert into a sport fishing oasis for residents of its four bordering states — Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois.

For millions more in neighboring states, it requires no more than a good day's drive to enjoy the fishing. Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois apparently learned their lesson when the lamprey eel nearly wiped out the sport fishing population in the early 1960s.

Each year more salmon and lake trout are planted by all four states to boost the fish population. Private fishing organizations, such as the non-profit Salmon Unlimited in Chicago, also continue separate plantings and keep an eye on commercial fishing and conservation work.

With the fish population nearly gone in the 60s and the annual dieoff of millions of alewives threatening to spoil beaches as well, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources decided to import coho salmon to eliminate some of the alewives.

The Oregon Department of Conservation donated 1 million coho eggs to Michigan and 850,000 smolts were planted in 1966.

With the success of Michigan's program, the other states joined, turning Lake Michigan into an excellent place to fish for several species of salmon and trout.

"Those wanting to visit Illinois for Salmon fishing may be surprised to learn Chicago and the northern suburb of Waukegan are the places to go. The center of attention in Indiana is Michigan City.

In Wisconsin, cities benefitting from the boom in salmon and trout fishing are Algoma, Kenosha, Milwaukee, Manitowish-Water, Two Rivers, Port Washington, Sturgeon Bay and Sheboygan.

In Michigan, fishermen head for Benton Harbor-St. Joseph, Frankfort, Ludington, Muskegon, Manistee, Manistique, New Buffalo, Onekama, Saugatuck, South Haven and Traverse City.

The visitor need not worry about fishing services. Most salmon and trout hot-spots have charter boats for hire.

The first-time salmon fisherman is best off arranging for a charter boat in advance, as Lake Michigan fishing requires special trolling equipment, such as downriggers to hold lures at the proper depth.

Archery club slates open house

West Town Archers, who just held their new outdoor archery range last year, are inviting everyone who is interested to an open house Saturday, March 22 from 1-6 p.m.

Archery is one of the growing outdoor family sports. The club will provide refreshments, technical information and films. They hope to give interested persons some insight into the world of archery. There will be applications for membership available.

The 40 acre range which is spread over hills and woodlands will be open to people who wish to visit it. The open house will be held at the heated club house located on the range. The range is just west of St. Charles, Illinois on Campton Rd. Campton can be reached off of North Ave., west of Randall Rd. in St. Charles.

West Town Archers is affiliated with the St. Charles Park District and are members of the National Field Archery Association and the Illinois Archery Association.

For additional information call Kent Prather, Club Vice-President at 882-5632.

Blue Demon Relays today; Maine East defends title

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

If today's Blue Demon Relays at Maine East High School turn out to be a repeat of the Central Suburban Indoor track championships, not too many people would be surprised.

The three top squads at the CSL meet, held two weeks ago at Maine East, will be present and in top form today. They include league champ Maine West, runner-up Niles West, and third-place Maine East.

Three other teams from the CSL will compete, including Highland Park, Niles North, and a tough Maine South squad.

Rounding out the field will be six Mid-Suburban League entries — Hersey, Prospect, Wheeling, Fremd, Arlington, and Conant. The meet is scheduled to begin at noon.

"Our kids are still sky-high after winning the conference indoor," said Maine West coach Ron Brown, whose Warriors are strong in the relay events which count so heavily at the Blue Demon. "We're still up on a cloud. I'd rather have the boys hungry."

John Coughlan's Maine East team will be defending the title they won last year. As a matter of fact, the Demons have taken practically every Blue Demon crown since the meet was inaugurated 10 years ago. Only Maine South and Maine West have finished first, aside from Coughlan's teams.

"It's nice to be home," said Brown, when asked about East's home-track advantage. "Maine East works out there all the time while some of these teams like Fremd and Wheeling don't even have much of an indoor schedule."

Fremd, Hersey, and Prospect from the MSL may be expected to do reasonably well today, although injuries have cut into the effectiveness of both Fremd and Hersey.

Fremd's shotputter Rich Sharpe, whose season-best is 52½, has been hampered with tendonitis of the hand, and Viking quartermiler Dave Wickum is hobbled by a hamstring pull. Both are expected to compete.

Other Fremd standouts are expected to be miler Dave Scott, who has registered a 4:35, and junior hurdler Sam Benavides. Viking pole vaulter Randy Gray will be trying to better his season-best of 13-0.

"Depth is the key," said Fremd coach Pat Brogan. "You've got to have depth in this meet."

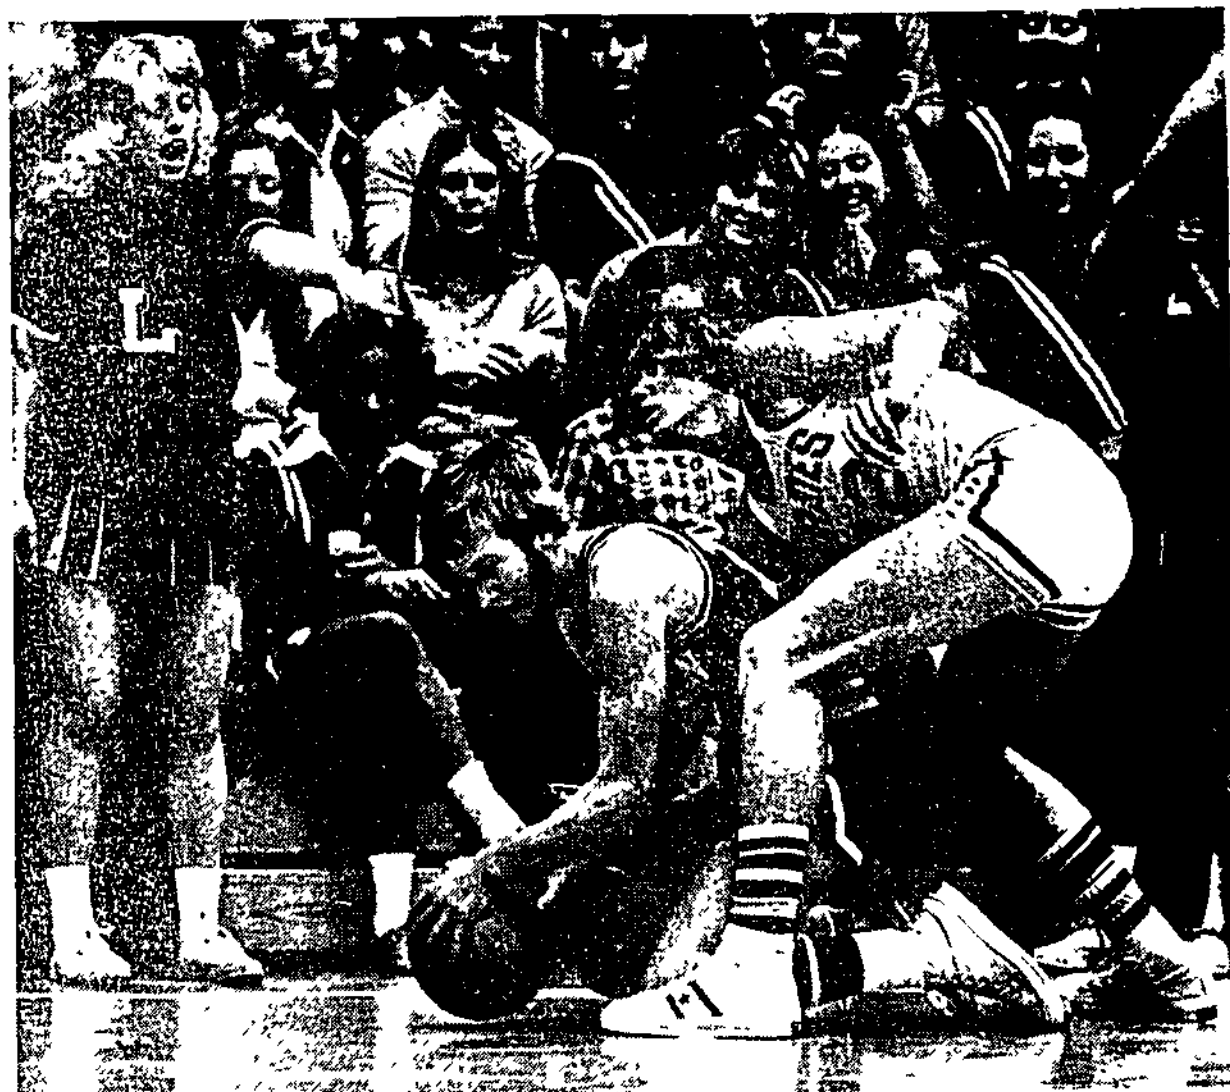

The Vikings rattled off a 3:36 clocking in the mile relay at Bloom last weekend, a time which should put them in the good company of Maine West, Niles West, and Maine East.

Hersey's track squad is riddled with injuries and illness which have sidelined triple-jumper Tony Becker and Jim DiLenge, the Huskies' versatile long jumper and hurdler. Becker is definitely going to stay home today and DiLenge is doubtful.

Coach Larry Travis' Huskies will look to hurdler John Wozniak, long jumper Glen Troy, pole vaulter Paul Martin, and a corps of good relays teams.

Prospect's Jack Devero may be the best triple jumper at the meet with an indoor tops of 42-9¼. Other athletes to watch are Wheeling hurdler Jim Lemke, Arlington high jumper Jim Loughnane, Conant distance man Mark Kaufman, and Prospect's sophomore jumper, Brad Millar.

In other track action today, Schaumburg and Palatine will be running at the Naperville Relays. Rolling Meadows will host Carmel, and Hoffman Estates will visit Buffalo Grove.

by DON FRISKE

Within the next few years, it is feasible that some police department somewhere may have the world's strongest man on their staff.

Andy Jackson, studying criminal justice at Harper College, has been lifting weights for the past six years. His goal is to be the world's strongest man by 1977 in his 220-pound weight class.

Ho picked 1977 for economic reasons because in that year the championship is going to be in Sydney, Australia. The country is paying all expenses for the entire team.

If Jackson's goal is reached, he will also be the youngest man to win the title as he is only 19 years old now.

For the past two years, Jackson has been competing in power lifting meets with his team, the Windy City Power Lifters, from the Leaning Tower YMCA in Niles. He's competed in five official meets, the last of which was on Feb. 15.

In that meet, the Junior State tournament, Jackson set two junior state records. He lifted 600 pounds in the squat and had a three-event total of 1,520 pounds.

Jackson became interested in weightlifting his freshman year at Niles West High School.

"Weightlifting is a sport. I enjoy it because it's you yourself against the weights," explained Jackson. "I also enjoy it because it gives me a chance to push my body to its maximum limit."

Jackson makes a clear distinction between power lifting and Olympic competition, something people often combine or confuse. In power lifting, three events are judged — the squat, bench press and dead lift. In Olympic, the clean-and-jerk and the snatch are the two events.

"More technique is involved in Olympic, whereas strength is stressed in power lifting," said Jackson. "Power lifters are much stronger because it's you versus the weight rather than you versus the technique."

Last July, Jackson teamed up with Lyle Schwartz, a professor at Northwestern. Since Schwartz became his coach, 300 pounds have been added to Jackson's total.

Schwartz, who was at one time the fourth strongest man in the world, has given Jackson new ideas and a set program to follow.

"I used to lift with gym shoes but now I switch foot gear with each event. For the dead lift, I wear ballerina slippers and it's made a tremendous difference because it brings my feet closer to the floor, cutting down on the force," explained Jackson.

Schwartz has Jackson on a strict (meat, cheese and tuna) protein diet, but he "didn't tell me I had to quit smoking," said Jackson. "Smoking doesn't matter because wind isn't a factor."

Dr. Paul Ward, the athletic director for all the Chicago Health Clubs, has also been instrumental in improving Jackson's skills. Ward has given Jackson mind power.

"I start to think about a meet a week beforehand and I make my whole mind blank," Jackson said. "I relax my whole body through my mind and I can actually see myself lifting the weight in my mind. It took me over two months to master this and it used to take me 30 minutes to blank my mind. Now I can do it in five, and I haven't missed a lift using this technique."

Jackson is glad he decided to go for outside help to improve himself, something too many lifters fail to do.

Practicing five and a half hours a week, Jackson sees improvements with each outing. He uses positive thinking when people tell him that he's going to level off sooner or later.

Jackson's next challenge will be the National College Tournament on April 5 and 6 in Kansas City. Harper College administrators Dr. Robert Lahl and Dr. Guerin Fisher will help finance Jackson's trip, and Fisher is also looking for a weight lifting scholarship for Jackson at some school.

This national tourney is just one more long step toward Australia for Jackson. The totals he feels necessary to be the world's strongest man — a 500 bench, a 730 squat, and a 730 dead lift — are not far-fetched goals considering the rate at which he improves and the weights he has already defeated.

Track win to Meadows

Rolling Meadows defeated Prospect, 68-50, in an indoor dual track meet at Prospect Thursday as pole vaulter Mark Harris of the winning Mustangs reached 14 feet.

Other top performances for coach Joe Vitton's Meadows team were personal-best high-jump efforts by Greg Davis and Jeff Lund at 6-1, and a 47-5½ shotput toss by Jim Blum.

Mustang runner Mike Scott was a double winner with firsts in the mile (4:46.7) and the 880 (2:09.1). He nipped Prospect's Pat White in the mile and Greg Tobiasz in the half.

Winning two events for the Prospect Knights of coach Joe Wanner was senior standout Jack Devero, who captured firsts in the long jump (18-7½) and the triple jump (38-0). Teammate Brad Miller was second in the long jump and third in the triple jump.

Meadows' hurdlers Jeff Ramas and Mike Matties took turns edging Prospect's Jim Wright in the 60-yard highs and lows. Ramas beat Wright, 10.1 to 10.2 in the highs with Matties third, and Matties nudged Wright, 10.7 to 10.8, in the lows as Ramas ran third.

Wright won the 440, however, in :57.6, beating Mustang Fred Kocian by three-tenths of a second.

Other winners were Meadows' Rick Sutton in the 50 (:05.8) and Prospect's Matt Lawson in the two-mile (10:23.5). Rolling Meadows won the 880-relay and the Knights took the mile relay.

The Mustang frosh-soph team won also, 72-46.

YMCA sets swimming program

"Could your youngster drown?" The best way to "drown-proof" a youngster is to teach him to swim," says Nicki Daehler, Aquatic Program Director of the Northwest Suburban YMCA, 300 E. Northwest Hwy. in Des Plaines. "That's the basic idea behind the (2) YMCA Learn-to-Swim Weeks during March 24-28 and March 31-April 4. Most youngsters can be taught basic swimming in five lessons using the YMCA method.

"Not only is swimming necessary for safety, but it opens the way to a whole range of exciting water sports. Boating, water skiing, — none of these should be attempted without first becoming a good swimmer.

"After five lessons using the 'Y' method," Nicki says, "beginners should be able to safely swim at least 25 feet and be ready for more advanced instruction. Those successfully completing the course will be awarded a YMCA certificate."

You can take the first step toward "drownproofing" your child, or yourself, for that matter, by calling the YMCA at 296-3376 for further information.

Closed-meeting notification resolution OK'd

Robert Rausch

by WANDALYN RICE

Harper College trustees Thursday decided to follow the example of Caesar's wife by voting 6 to 1 to provide more public notice of their meetings than their attorney says is required by law.

Board members adopted a resolution presented by board member Robert Rausch requiring them to notify the press of the time and subject of all closed meetings of the board. The board's attorney, Frank Hines, had advised the board members that under the Illinois Open Meetings Act they are required only to provide notice of public meetings.

The Open Meetings Act requires that all board meetings be public except for discussion of hiring and firing of personnel, land purchase, collective bargaining or student discipline.

In explaining the reason for his resolution, Rausch said, "The board, like Calphurnia (Caesar's wife), should be above suspicion and should constantly operate as publicly as possible." He said his proposal "is not intended to reflect on any past (Harper) board, but to affirm this board's intent."

Board Pres. William Kelly voted against the resolution, but declined to explain his vote.

Pay hikes average more than 9%

Average salary increases for both administrators and faculty members at Harper will be more than 9 per cent for the 1975-76 school year under salary plans adopted Thursday.

Faculty members will receive salary increases of 6.03 per cent of this year's salary plus $600, for an average raise of 9.7 per cent. Average salary increases for administrators will be 9.5 per cent. Salaries for individual administrators will be determined by merit evaluations.

In addition to the money for administrative salary increases, the board also approved a package of $16,000 to $19,000 that will be given to administrators as one-time bonuses for outstanding performance. The administrative salaries will be set by College Pres. Robert Lahti.

The faculty salary increases were negotiated by the board members and faculty. Thursday's board meeting was marked by angry exchanges between board members and faculty representatives concerning the faculty salary ranges, which are set separately from the negotiated raises.

The faculty members protested because the board intends to increase the salary ranges by just 6 per cent, rather than by the 9.7 per cent of the negotiated raises. As a result, faculty members at the top of the range will not receive more than a 6 per cent raise.

The salary ranges determine the minimum and maximum salaries for faculty members holding the various academic ranks such as professor, assistant professor and instructor.

Algonquin Rd. stoplight asked

The Harper board agreed Thursday to ask the Illinois Dept. of Transportation to approve installation of a stoplight at the college entrance on Algonquin Road.

The board approved a resolution from board member Judith Troehler calling for the light to relieve the hazards caused by the large number of cars that enter and leave the campus.

College Vice Pres. William Mann said administrators were told that the college does not qualify for a traffic light. He said he has written the transportation department to ask for the reasons for the disapproval.

Mann said the light would cost about $80,000 and he hopes the cost could be split between the state, Village of Palatine and the college. Presently he said, Harper security officers direct traffic on Algonquin Road and the driveway from 3:30 to 6 p.m.

Mann said there was an accident in front of the college this week. "The safety hazard is pretty obvious," he said.

NAACP weighs lawsuits

State set to act on schools bias

by WANDALYN RICE

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Board of Education took its first action on school desegregation this week after hearing that the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People is considering filing federal court suits against segregation in Illinois.

Officials of the NAACP told the board, "De facto segregation in Illinois is a crisis. We're about 10 years behind Mississippi and the Southern states in this area."

Board members Thursday voted unanimously to enter a school-desegregation case involving the Rockford public schools as a friend of the court after hearing the NAACP leaders.

Rockford currently is in federal court on a suit brought by local residents challenging a local desegregation plan. The school district has been involved with the court for 2 1/2 years.

NATHANIAL JONES, chief national legal counsel for the NAACP, said the organization is considering filing desegregation suits in Illinois similar to suits the group has filed in Detroit and Boston.

He said, "We have not initiated any broad-scale action in Illinois before because we have had our limited resources and had been told by our people here that meaningful steps would be taken in this area by the new state board and (former State Schools) Supt. Michael Bakalis."

Now, Jones said, "We have been advised by our Illinois people that the steps have not been taken and that segregation is increasing in Illinois." He said if the NAACP files suit in Illinois it would sue the state board because "the responsibility for desegregation in this state and any other state rest with the responsible state agencies."

THE NAACP has been involved in the court case that resulted in the busing controversy in Boston last fall and also filed the suit against the Detroit public schools demanding that students be bused between the city and suburbs to achieve integration. The Detroit case has been sent back to lower courts by the U.S. Supreme Court for a new ruling.

State board members said they would study the whole issue of segregation statewide before setting a general policy on the issue. However, they agreed to act immediately to join the Rockford case after being told by board member Justine Walhout, a resident of Rockford, that the state had not been represented in earlier hearings in the case.

The board members also asked State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin to study alternative actions on segregation, including the possibility of the board itself filing suit against school districts.

JA Trade Fair next weekend at Woodfield

Displays ranging from terrariums and fudge to jewelry, thermometers and paddle-pong games will be presented March 22-23 — at the Junior Achievement Trade Fair at the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

Acting as advisors to the 1,300 teenagers will be 115 companies from the Northwest suburban area and Chicago.

High school students run their own small-scale corporations under the guidance of businessmen. They fund their operations by selling stock, electing officers, paying expenses and taxes and marketing their own products.

Other displays include auto safety lights that plug into cigarette lighters, personalized matches and lamps made from Coke and Pepsi cans.

Northwest suburban companies sponsoring some of the JA firms include Union Oil 76, Palatine; Universal Oil Products, Des Plaines; Western Electric, Rolling Meadows; DeSoto, Des Plaines; Motorola, Schaumburg; Sara Lee, Deerfield; Central Telephone Co., Des Plaines; Illinois Tool Works, Des Plaines; and Kemper Insurance, Long Grove.

Obituaries

Mary Utpadel

Mrs. Mary Utpadel, 83, nee Grandt, of Wheeling, died Thursday in North Riverwoods Nursing Center, Mundelein. She was born March 14, 1891, in Wheeling Township.

Visitation is Sunday from 3 to 9:30 p.m. in Oehler Funeral Home, Leo and Perry streets, Des Plaines.

Funeral service will be at 1 p.m. Monday in the funeral home. Officiating will be the Rev. James F. Bach of St. John Lutheran Church, Northbrook. Burial will be in St. John Cemetery, Northbrook.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Fred. Surviving are a son, Harold H. (Margaret) of Wheeling; one grandson, Gale H. (Cynthia) Utpadel of Wheeling; one great-grandson, John Utpadel, and a brother, August Grandt of Wheeling.

Family requests memorial donations may be made to St. John Lutheran Church, 3020 Milwaukee Ave., Northbrook.

Monet paintings at Art Institute

One of the most noteworthy art exhibits to be seen this year opens today at the Art Institute of Chicago.

The first comprehensive exhibition of work by the French master, Claude Monet (1810-1926), to be mounted in a United States museum since 1960 is hung in the Morton Wing now through May 11.

Organized by the Art Institute for an exclusive showing, more than 100 paintings from all phases of the French impressionist's career will be displayed.

Loans are from public and private collections throughout the United States and Europe.

Admission is $1.50 for adults; 50 cents for children, students and senior citizens. The Art Institute is located at Michigan Avenue at Adams Street in downtown Chicago.

JIM JACOBS,
new star of "The Magnolia Club"

'Tis the time we're ALL Irish!

"Oh St. Patrick was a gentleman
"Who came of decent people;
"He built a church in Dublin town,
"And on it put a steeple."

--Henry Bennett

Who doesn't boast of being a bit Irish on St. Patrick's Day? And why not? March 17 is a merry occasion when everyone is expected to gather in the neighborhood tavern for a supper of corned beef and a stein (hardly one will do) of cold often green tinted beer.

In rating holidays, March 17 is akin to New Year's Eve. The same kind of good cheer is toasted but perhaps in a less sophisticated manner. Ale is substituted for champagne.

Yet Americans who feign Irish heritage on St. Pat's just to participate in the festivities — "St. Patrick's Day is like pretzels . . . they are much better with beer" — would be sorely disappointed to find themselves in the homeland this Monday.

There, the holiday is primarily a religious observance, the start of a three-day period of devotion. Most of the homage takes place in a church, not the local pub.

THE DAY of course, is commemorative of St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland who for the most part is credited with organizing the Church of Ireland and spreading Christianity throughout the country.

But why choose March 17? No one seems to remember. Actually the day itself is shrouded in mystery. Some say St. Patrick was born on March 17. Others say he died on that date. However, there is no documented record for either.

Some feel St. Patrick lived to be as old as Moses, 120 years. Others say he died about 461 A.D.

He was, we'll say, born the later part of the fourth century into a Roman

Get out your shillelagh and join State St. Parade . . .

Dig out the green in your closet and stick a shamrock in your lapel. It's time for a parade.

The annual Chicago St. Patrick's Day Parade begins at 1 p.m. Monday at State Street and Wacker Drive. The parade will proceed down State, past the viewing stand at the corner of State and Madison and wind up at Congress.

In honor of the 1976 International

Woman's Year, the two Grand Marshals this year are female. They are Mrs. Richard Daley, wife of the mayor and Mrs. Steve Bailey whose husband was grand marshal of the event for many years before he passed away.

This year's theme is "Irish in America" and over 50 floats will recognize the labor leaders, teachers, police officers and movie stars of Irish heritage.

Special guests of the parade are actor George Hamilton and the "Jury's Cabaret Show," 20 performers from Dublin, Ireland. Sixty bands will be featured, and 75,000 people will be marching in the parade.

If you can't be there to see it in person tune in Channel 9 at 1 p.m. WGN-TV is televising the parade live.

. . . or take in an exhibit of artifacts at Smart Gallery

If your taste runs to art spend St. Pat's Day at the David and Alfred Smart Gallery of the University of Chicago where 19th Century replicas of Irish artifacts dating from the 5th to the 12th Centuries are currently on exhibit. For instance, on display is a copy of a bell believed to be used by St. Patrick himself.

Ten items, including replicas of a brooch, a cross and a reliquary, made in 1892 by English craftsman Edmon Johnson, are also part of the collection. He is also known to have made at least one jewelry copy for Queen Victoria.

The originals of the display items are now mostly in the National Museum in Dublin, Ireland, and they fall in the irreplaceable, priceless-art category. Even the replicas were made with semi-precious stones and enamels over hand-worked metals.

The Gallery is located at 5550 S. Greenwood Ave., Chicago and is open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. The exhibit continues through March 30.

Catholic family (that is fact) and lived a long, productive life.

AND TO SET the records straight, St. Patrick was not born in Ireland. He was in fact an immigrant. Wales, Scotland, England and even France all claim his birthplace. Take your pick.

But the story continues, that at the age of 16, St. Patrick (who then was not a saint at all), was kidnaped by a band of pirates and brought to Ireland as a slave where he worked several years as a swineherd for a prominent farmer. He escaped to the mainland, received his training in the church and returned to Ireland as a bishop about 433 A.D. However, no dates are certain.

Yet there are many written accounts of his miracles. St. Patrick supposedly raised his father from the dead, burned snow to make fire and rid the land of the cursed Druids by having the earth gobble them up.

Yet he is most noted for expelling all of the snakes from Ireland, except perhaps one old serpent. Folklore still maintains that one snake continues to rise in his pond each dawn and inquire about the saint. Other stories say the serpent was finally tricked, coaxed into a box and thrown into the Atlantic Ocean.

There is no tall tale however regarding the shamrock.

In explaining the Holy Trinity to his followers St. Patrick once held up the plant and indicated the three leaves as the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, three gods in one, each separate and distinct. The stem he said represented the godhead from which the three proceeded.

Aye, and here are the places to toast ol' St. Pat.

So you'd rather just stick around the neighborhood and celebrate. Area restaurants and pubs are well prepared for the most widely unofficial drinking holiday of the year. Kegs of green beer are being rolled out and plenty of corned beef and cabbage is on order.

But just remember when the alarm goes off early Tuesday morning, don't look for a Leprechaun to cover for you at work. He will have disappeared along with all the green beer the night before.

DURTY NELLIE'S, 55 N. Bothwell, Palatine.

Patterned off an Irish pub in the home country, Durty Nellie's is not only celebrating St. Patrick's Day, but also its third anniversary. Festivities begin tonight and carry over Sunday and Monday. Entertaining will be the Cobblers All, an Irish folk singing group and of course the bagpipers will be in high spirit throughout the three-day celebration. Green beer? "No way," said a spokesman. That's just a gimmick. But there will be plenty of cold beer on tap and authentic Irish cheer.

HAYMAKER'S RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE, 345 W. Northwest Hwy., Palatine.

Ready for this? Free green beer will be given away between the hours of 8 and 10 p.m. Monday. Stick around. A rock group, Heaven and Earth will be featured beginning at 9:30 p.m. They hail from Colorado, however, and not from Ireland itself. But if you've imbibed enough free beer it won't make a bit of difference.

OLDE TOWN INN, 18 W. Busse, Mount Prospect, and 36 S. Northwest Hwy., Palatine.

Save your appetite. A dinner served family style, all-you-can-eat, featuring corned beef and cabbage (what else?)

will be offered Sunday and Monday at both locations beginning at 5 p.m. Price is $2.95 for adults; $.75 for children. Make an Irish pig of yourself. Go both nights.

BELLA INN, 15 E. Campbell, Arlington Heights.

Eat your heart out Monday night. A buffet featuring corned beef and cabbage will be featured beginning at 5 p.m. Price is $2.90. To wash it down, there will be pitchers of green beer available.

SOME OTHER PLACE PUB, 1021 E. Algonquin Road, Arlington Heights.

It is going to cost you to get inside SOP to hear the Chicago rock group, Sparkle, but once inside you can enjoy steins of green beer for two bits between 8 and 10 p.m.

BRIDGET'S RESTAURANT, Holiday Inn, Touhy Ave. and U.S. 45, Des Plaines.

Getting a head start on the Irish holiday, Bridget's has been offering a complimentary Irish Coffee with any meal, Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays throughout March. The offer remains good on St. Pat's Day.

KNIGHT'S PUB, 901 E. Oakton St., Des Plaines.

Who doesn't get hungry after a few beers? Complimentary corned beef sandwiches will be served after 9 p.m. Party favors in honor of St. Pat's Day will also be distributed. Celebrate with owner Bill Marquette who is providing the entertainment that night.

MEAT N' PLACE, Randhurst Shopping Center's Town Hall Level, Mount Prospect.

If you get hungry while you're out shopping Monday stop for a St. Pat's special, a big schooner of beer and a hot

Robert Redford flying high in latest movie

"The Great Waldo Pepper," the newest Robert Redford movie is soon to open in the North and suburbs.

Redford makes his first screen appearance in more than a year and teams for the third time with Academy Award winner producer-director George Roy Hill of "The Sting" and "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" fame.

"Waldo Pepper," which opened at Barrington's Cntlow Theater Friday, is the story of the 1920's barnstormers, the men with their heads in the clouds. Redford plays Waldo — brash, iconoclastic, possessed by a passion for flying and given to dreams of glory. He refuses to face life on the ground.

Swedish born Bo Svenson, who has appeared in a variety of television roles, heads the costarring cast. Also starring are Bo Brundin, Susan Sarandon, who made her film debut in "Joe," Margot Kidder and Geoffrey Lewis.

Museum to display Easter traditions in other lands

Colorfully decorated eggs, baked goods and traditional Easter baskets from around the world will be featured in the "Easter in Other Lands" exhibit

Flower Show tickets offered at discount

For the first time since its inception almost two decades ago, the Chicago Flower Show will be held after Easter.

This year, Easter is March 30 and the Flower Show begins Saturday, April 6, and runs through Sunday, April 13. Now you can give the world's largest indoor flower show as a very special gift to your mother, your wife, to anyone very special.

And the Chicago Flower and Garden Show is offering a special advance ticket sale price which makes this gift idea even more attractive. The offer is for advance tickets at $2.50 each, a saving of $1 per ticket from the price at the door to McCormick Place while the show is on.

The tickets come in a holiday gift envelope with a colorful brochure describing the 1975 Flower Show. Ticket orders should be received by Monday, March 24, to insure that tickets will arrive before Easter. The tickets, gift envelope and full-color brochure can be obtained from the Chicago Flower Show, 18 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 60603, by mail or in person.

March 20-30 at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry.

Among the groups represented will be Luxembourg, Slovenia, Italy, the Ukraine, Puerto Rico, Sweden, Egypt, Hawaii, Poland, Lithuania and the United States.

The Polish display will provide examples of hand-painted eggs on which figures of shepherds and farmers of the Podhale region of southern Poland are painted in water colors.

Hawaiian Easter eggs decorated in geometric designs known as "tapa" will be included. This ancient decorative art was originally done only in brown and white, but today many bright colors also are used.

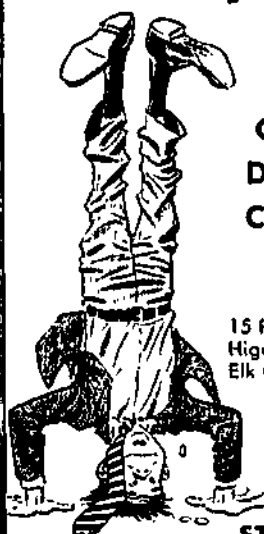

Another feature of "Easter in Other Lands" will be eggs decorated as they were by Luxembourg farmers a century ago. They created their distinctive designs by boiling eggs in onion peelings. Other patterns are made by parsley tied around eggs boiled in strong coffee.

Ukrainian eggs are prepared by designs drawn in melted bees' wax upon fresh uncooked eggs with a tool called a "kistka." After being dripped in progressively darker colors, the egg is held near a candle flame to melt away the wax. An egg decorated in this manner, once varnished for gloss and durability, is said to last for years.

The "Easter in Other Lands" exhibit will be presented in the west pavilion of the museum. Admission to the exhibit and the museum is free. Located at 57th Street and Lake Shore Drive, its hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sundays and holidays.

Classy Dining in Former Schoolhouse

by Edward Brooks

The old country schoolhouse at 117 North Ave., Barrington, still functions as an educational facility. But instead of readin', ritin' and 'rithmetic, it teaches the joy of good eating. First built in 1885, the building now houses the Greenery (381-9000), a charming, informal, yet elegant restaurant operated by Niles Nelson, airline executive, and his wife Adele. Tuesday through Sunday, customers are educated to the delights of trout stuffed with crabmeat, tournedos in wine sauce and other dishes listed on a relatively short but well-chosen menu. Patrons dine in a series of small rooms at colorful tile-topped tables amid stuccoed walls, hanging ferns and lowered dividers. Dinners range from $6.95 — for crevettes de Jonghe (shrimp baked in a garlicky wine sauce) and crepes Parisienne filled with crabmeat — to $9.95 — for filet mignon Wellington. Appetizer or soup, baked stuffed potato, salad and dessert are included in the entree price. Baked onion soup came piping hot and hearty beneath a crusty topping of toasted bread and browned cheese. Lentil soup pleased a companion. Fruit cocktail, fresh grapefruit and fresh melon were the alternatives.

My entree, caneton (duckling) a la Be-lasco, arrived with skin crisped and orange sauce on the side as requested. Sautéed soft-shell crabs, which I also sampled, were delicious and tender and tasted fresh, although our waitress, when we had first ordered, helpfully cautioned that they were frozen. Chicken Kiev, veal scallopine prepared with Madeira and mushrooms, English sole and tenderloin tips in wine sauce completed the roster of regular dinner entrees. Roast prime rib and frog legs almondine were listed as specials of the evening. Also available were several a la carte dishes ($6.95-$8.95) including turbot, broiled sirloin and baby lobster tails. Dinner desserts are limited to ice creams and sherberts, so I decided to splurge and ordered profiterole with chocolate sauce (95 cents extra). It was worth every penny.

The Greenery serves from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and 5 to 11 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and 5 to 9 p.m. Sunday. There's no bar, but cocktails and wine from a limited list are available for drinking at your table.

Computerized viewing coming

A relatively unknown company, Sun Classic Pictures, Inc., has made a small fortune by utilizing the computer in film editing and distribution of its pictures. All of Sun's movies are rated G, including "Brother of the Wind," "The Legend of Grizzly Adams," "Toklat," and "Chariot of the Gods." Before any of these movies were released, the company test-screened each film with a selected audience. The responses of the audience were recorded by computer, then scenes with negative responses were edited out -- again by computer. When it's time to distribute a movie, Sun Classics feeds demographic info into the computer and the best market-viewing areas come out. Last year the company spent over $5 million on advertising, but its profits are paying off any debts. Maybe the president of Sun Classic Pictures, Inc. is also run by computer?

Gwendolyn Brooks

Oakton Community College in Morton Grove will celebrate its fifth birthday March 16 with a "community day" program featuring U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, Illinois Poet Laureate Gwendolyn Brooks and Henry Mazer, assistant conductor of the Chicago Symphony.

Also appearing that day will be Jack Mabley, Chicago Tribune columnist; Mary Alice McWhinnie, the first woman scientist to work at the South Pole; State Sen. John Nimrod, R-Skokie, and a drug investigator for the Chicago Police Dept.

Events for the day are scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m. and will include student and faculty presentations as well as the featured speakers. All events will be free and open to the public and take place on the college campus, Oakton and Nagle, Morton Grove.

The schedule for the featured speakers is:

- At 1 p.m. Mikva will speak in Building 6 of the campus and Mrs. McWhinnie, one of the first women to spend a winter in Antarctica, will speak in Building 3.

- At 1:15 p.m. Gwendolyn Brooks will read and discuss her poetry in Building 6. After 2:15 p.m. she will be the guest of an informal reception until 4:30 p.m.

- At 3 p.m. Mabley will speak in Building 3, with Henry Mazer discussing classical music at 3:30 p.m. in Building 6.

The official fifth birthday party reception for the college is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. in the college board room in Building 3. Bernard Brown, an investigator with the Chicago Police Dept., will present a series of demonstrations and exhibits throughout the day.

St. Patrick's Day upon us'Tis the time we're all a bit o' Irish

COUNTY CORK, center of shamrock trade in Ireland, each year raises several million plants to be sent all over the world in time to arrive in florist shops by March 17.

Yet ye gods, wearing a shamrock in the lapel while toasting in the local tavern is not what St. Patrick had in mind.

At one time the local inns in Ireland offered a "Patrick's pot of beer or whiskey" in honor of the patron saint who supposedly introduced distillery to his countrymen.

This, however, seems to be just another instance of folklore for St. Patrick was a promoter of temperance if not an out and out teetotaler.

This is not to say there will be no celebrating breaking out Monday in Ireland's local pubs. It's a big day for the Irish. But never is the religious and political significance undermined.

THE EARLIEST observation in the United States occurred on March 17, 1737, in Boston. It was celebrated by the Charitable Irish Society, a Protestant organization for indigent Irish immigrants.

Then in March 17, 1776, during the evacuation of Boston by the British, colonial forces used "Boston" as a password, "St. Patrick" as the countersign. The grand marshal of a parade on that date was none other than George Washington.

Celebrations quickly spread to other colonial towns, Philadelphia in 1780, and New York in 1781. And one of the biggest parades in the country is held annually in Chicago where a large population of Irish-Americans reside.

But it doesn't really make any difference what your heritage is. On St. Patrick's Day everyone is a bit Irish and sometimes tipsy too.

corned beef sandwich both for $1.50. The offer is also good today and tomorrow.

BUTCH McGUIRE'S, 300 E. Rand Rd., Mount Prospect.

St. Patrick's Day is always a big event for Butch McGuire's. In fact they've been decorated well in advance of the Irish holiday. Likewise the celebration has already started, too. Green beer is being served throughout the weekend, building up to the big night Monday when the Shannon Rovers will appear to show off on their bagpipes. What else could you expect from an Irish pub?

FIDDLER'S, 1790 Busse Rd., Mount Prospect.

Upstairs in the dining room corned beef and cabbage will be the featured item. It always is on the menu anyhow. But don't stop here. After eating, stop down in the lounge where you can order a choice, in honor of St. Pat's, green beer or Irish coffee. Entertainment Monday is being provided by Baraboo.

Area restaurants with corned beef and cabbage on the menu for St. Patrick's Day include:

Bicentennial medals honor twelve American patriots

The Letcher Mint has just released the first in a new series of bicentennial commemorative medals in gold relief against a silver field. Sculptured by Carl Romanelli, each issue features the bust of an early American patriot sculptured in intricate detail.

The gold and silver in each medal is combined to form one permanent piece of metal so the gold is all within the area of the bust and the field is entirely silver.

This is not gold plating or "gold on silver" but an entirely new process resulting from the world's first production of coin and medals in contrasting colors of two precious metals. It is a bonding of 24 karat gold to a surface of .999 fine silver.

The following American patriots have been selected for the 12-piece series: Nathan Hale, Thomas Jefferson,

Collecting coins by Mort Reed

George Washington, Paul Revere, Patrick Henry, John Hancock, James Madison, John Adams, Molly Pitcher, Commodore Perry, James Monroe and Andrew Jackson.

THE SERIES will be issued at the rate of one per month at $30 each which is guaranteed regardless of how high the cost of precious metals may rise.

Only 7,800 sets will be struck and once the original edition has been completed the dies will be destroyed to insure rarity of the series and extend the collectors' value. Interested readers may write: The Letcher Mint, P.O. Box 107, Lancaster, Calif. 93534.

THE INVESTORS Book Club has named "Collecting Rare Coins for Profit," by Q. David Bowers, recently published by Harper and Row, as a featured selection recommended to its readers.

In a letter sent to Investors Book Club members, the new Bowers' book was described in part as an investors' guide to the romance, excitement and solid investment common sense of coins. Ranging from the recent issues like the 1964 Kennedy half dollar to centuries-old gold and silver coinage, Bowers provides a lucid and entertaining investor's eye view of coin collecting that shows you what to look for, where to buy it and how to sell it for a maximum profit potential.

If you are interested in investment security, Bowers shows how 237 randomly selected rare coins, purchased in 1916 for a total of $1,000, yielded a return of $38,185 by 1974. Better yet, within that time not one single coin in the study decreased in value. But there is plenty of action for the speculator, too, and Bowers outlines the ways to profit from bulk coin investing, common date gold coins and many more.

FROM BUYING and keeping your coins to the fine points of putting your coins on the market and from a sharp-eyed look at the future prospects for coin prices to a comparison of the investment choice between rare and common coins, Bowers creates an engaging and informative analysis of an investment field that is receiving increasing attention from serious-minded investors everywhere.

Packed with hundreds of illustrations, charts, a glossary of coin terminology and a list of major numismatic clubs and publications, Collecting Rare Coins For Profit is a book that unlocks a whole new profit future for the investor.

This new reference is hardbound, 326 pages in length and is available for $15 through Bowers and Ruddy Galleries, Inc., 6922 Hollywood Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90028.

Revolution heroes cited in stamps

The U.S. Postal Service will issue four commemorative stamps, honoring heroes of the American Revolution, in four different cities on March 25.

The set, Contributors to the Cause, was designed by Neil Boyle of Los Angeles and features a printed message on the reverse side under the adhesive.

The 8-cent Sybil Ludington stamp, to be released at Carmel, N.Y., depicts a 16-year-old who rode 40 miles through New York and Connecticut rallying her father's militia to repel a British attack on Danbury.

A Chicago release is planned for the 10-cent adhesive honoring Haym Salomon, a merchant and banker known as the "Financier of the Revolution" for his contributions to the bankrupt Continental Army and to the emerging new nation.

At Cambridge, Mass., a 10-cent stamp will be issued honoring Salem Poor, a black militiaman whose courageous actions at the Battle of Bunker Hill earned him a citation for bravery.

Fifteen-year-old Peter Francisco, a hero of the Battle of Guilford who fought with distinction until the British surrendered at Yorktown, is depicted on the 18-cent stamp to be released at Greensboro, N.C.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send their requests to the following addresses:

- "Salem Poor Stamp, Postmaster, Cambridge, Mass. 02139"
- "Haym Salomon Stamp, Postmaster, Chicago, Ill. 60607"

- "Peter Francisco Stamp, Postmaster, Pasadena, Calif. 91109"
- "Sybil Ludington Stamp, Postmaster, Carmel, N.Y. 10512"

Stamp notes by Bernadine M. Rechner

Collectors have two options for return of the Sybil Ludington cover—you can affix a two-cent stamp in the upper right hand corner and send an 8-cent remittance to cover the cost of a single new stamp or you can remit 16-cents and the postmaster will affix two of the Ludington stamps on your cover.

THE GREEK Post Office, on March 21, will release a set of three stamps commemorating the 160th anniversary of the death of Grigoris Dikeos-Papaflessas, patriot and hero of the Greek War of Independence.

Denominations are 4, 7 and 11 drachmae. Mint stamps are available from the Greek Post Office, Philatelic Service, 100, Aioulou Street, Athens 131, Greece.

Remittances should go by international bank draft in Greek funds.

Information on subscription service for stamp collectors is also available from the above address.

Keeshan hit with kids on 'n' off TV

HOLLYWOOD — Bob Keeshan, the rotund "Captain Kangaroo," works with children off the air more frequently than he does on his popular daily series which only occasionally features youngsters.

Keeshan, who makes his home in Babylon, Long Island, is a trustee of a New York child development center and a trustee of a hearing and speech center. The civic-minded performer also is chairman of the Board of the College of New Rochelle and president of his county's Police Athletic League.

He is a man in a hurry and fills his days with all manner of activities.

KEESHAN and his wife, Jeanne, have been married 24 years. They are the parents of Michael, 23; Laurie, 22; and Maeve, 20. All three are off and away at college.

The Keeshans are left rattling around the 23-room, two-story white frame Colonial home in which they've lived for 18 years.

But frequently on weekends Maeve is home from Wheaton College in Massachusetts, and not infrequently Michael and Laurie make the trip down from Dartmouth. They usually bring along a friend or two to fill the big house.

Inside and out the Keeshan home has the historical feeling of Williamsburg. Jeanne has decorated most of the rooms in early American antiques. Burnished wood and deep colors provide a solid, permanent atmosphere.

BOB HAS A couple of hiddenways in the house. His favorite is a study tucked away from the main traffic pattern. The walls are lined with books, as are the corridors, den, attic and living room.

He also has a library upstairs off the master bedroom. It is a remote nest where he likes to light a fire on a winter's evening and bury himself in a good book. He reads everything from colonial American history to the Civil War and science.

The house is in the middle of two and a half acres, which include a small pond and lots of trees. Bob patters around the property planting flowers and shrubs on those rare days when he has free time. A gardener cares for the day-to-day work. There are servants in the house, too, but Jeanne does all the cooking. She delights her husband with a pepper steak and several veal dishes. In the summer months Bob can be found barbecuing — with a book propped under his nose.

HE DEVOTES only 20 weeks a year to production of "Captain Kangaroo." During that time he spends an hour by train or in his automobile each morning driving to work in Manhattan.

Keeshan travels 70,000 miles a year speaking about children's entertainment and making public appearances during those months when his CBS series is not in production. He is committed to presenting more and better television shows for small fry.

After 20 years as Captain Kangaroo, Bob Keeshan, age 48, believes he still is able to think like a child and to apply that knack to his show:

Mike Landon rules 'Little House' roost

by DICK KLEINER

Hollywood — There is one important difference between Michael Landon and the real-life character of Charles Ingalls which he plays on the NBC series, "Little House on the Prairie."

"Ingalls had a beard in real life," Landon says. "But I don't. The problem is that I can't grow a beard — it just looks like stubble. I wasn't going to play the part for six months with a beard glued to my face so I decided to play him clean-shaven."

Other than that, Landon is trying to keep the show as true to the original "Little House" books by Ingalls' daughter, Laura Ingalls Wilder, as possible. Since Landon not only stars in the series but is the executive producer and writes many of the episodes he has a strong voice in matters of show policy.

"WE'RE TRYING TO stick close to the true story," Landon says. "The problem is the books were short and over four years — I think we can run four years — we'll need more than 100 stories. So we have to invent some."

"This year, for example, I was sick with meningitis encephalitis for two weeks. I was wrapped in ice. That made me think of the show we did about a typhus epidemic."

There are plenty of chances for story ideas cropping up in Landon's own home. Someday, somebody (probably Mike) will write a story about the Landons and The Big House in the City.

THERE ARE REALLY three families living at the Landons'. Mike has two adopted sons by his first marriage. His wife, Lynn, has a daughter by her first marriage. Together, Mike and Lynn have three, with a fourth — "and last" — due soon.

What makes the three families even more interesting is that each represents a different religion. Mike's two sons were raised in the Jewish faith. Lynn's daughter was raised as a Roman Catholic. Together, their three are Presbyterian.

"It really doesn't matter what religion they are," Mike says. "If you stick to the letter of religion they're all good."

LONDON'S LONG years on Bonanza developed him not only as an actor but as a writer and director and now he's producing as well.

MICHAEL LANDON
as "Pa Ingalls"

He says he is "slowly working" on a novel. He's written many screenplays but has not sold them.

"I think they are good," he says. "I've torn up the ones I didn't like so I have to believe the fault is with those who don't like them."

Eventually, he'll sell one. It's not exactly a goal because he gets enough satisfaction writing his TV shows but it is something yet to be fulfilled. He says he really has no great ambition at this point.

"Oh, yes, I guess I have one ambition," he says. "I'd like to play tennis better."

Could you please tell me if Telly Savalas and his brother, who also plays on the show "Kojak," are both bald. Please give me some background information on Demosthenes and print of picture of him. Include an address, too.

M.O.

Demosthenes Savalas

Neither Telly or his brother is bald. Telly just appears that way since he shaves his head. If he didn't, Telly would probably have as much hair as his brother.

Demosthenes, who plays the plant-loving Det. Stavros on the CBS series, "Kojak," was born in Bronx, New York. He was quite successful in the hotel and later the heating and air-conditioning business before giving in to his unfulfilled desire to become an actor. He got his first real taste of show business while in the U.S. Navy during World War II, when his commanding officer mentioned that he substitute for an ailing drummer with the famed Clyde McCoy band. This officer later decided to boost the morale of the men and chose Demosthenes to produce various stage shows.

Demosthenes' first television role was in "The Dick Powell Show" followed by guest appearances in "The Virginian," "The Man From U.N.C.L.E.," "Combat," "Mannix" and "All in the Family."

His feature film credits include: "Kelly's Heroes," "The Greatest Story Ever Told," "The Slender Thread," "RPM," "Johnny Cool," "Genghis Khan," "The Outfit" and "Good Neighbor Sam." You can write to Demosthenes in care of CBS Television Network, Press Information, Television City, Los Angeles, Calif., 90036.

Please tell me how many Academy Awards the movie "Patton" won.

L.N.

"Patton," the 1970 film starring George C. Scott, Karl Malden, Stephen Young, Michael Strong and Cary Loftin, won numerous awards including: Best Picture, Best Actor (George C. Scott), Best Director, Best Story, Best Screenplay, Best Art Direction, Best Film Editing and Best Sound Achievement.

Who starred in the made-for-TV movie called "Mr. and Mrs. Bo Jo Jones"?

A.H.

The stars of that 1971 movie were Desi Arnaz, Jr., Chris Norris, Dan Daily, Dina Merrill, Tom Bosley and Susan Strasberg.

Please print a picture of Tuesday Weld and tell me where and when she was born. Also, what are some of the movies that she has made?

T.C.

Tuesday Weld was born on August 27, 1943 in New York.

Tuesday Weld

Her film credits include: "Rally Round the Flag Boys," "The Five Pennies," "The Private Lives of Adam and Eve," "Return to Peyton Place," "Wild in the Country."...

Please tell me the actor that starred in the movie "The Sterile Cuckoo" with Liza Minnelli? Please print a picture of Liza.

J.G.

Liza Minnelli

The actor in that movie was Wendell Burton. The other stars in that 1969 film were Tim McIntire and Elizabeth Harrower. Liza, you may be interested to know, won an Academy Award nomination for Best Actress in that film.

Allgauer's

You can escape from your daily cares at Allgauer's Fireside, open everyday for lunch, dinner and late suppers. A large lobby area, decorated with live flowers and trees, creates a "spring" atmosphere all-year-round. Large, airy windows, overlooking the Des Plaines River, provide you with a scenic view of the nearby forest preserves.

You'll find prestigious banquet facilities for all occasions accommodating up to 800 people. A large patio area is available for open air events.

There's entertainment and dancing Tuesday through Saturday in the spacious show lounge.

Sunday is a special day at Allgauer's. A buffet brunch is featured from 11 a.m. until 2:30 p.m., and after 4 p.m. you can bring the entire family for a full seven-course dinner.

Allgauer's combines fine continental cuisine with elegant contemporary surroundings. You can choose from such delicacies as Alaskan king crab, shrimp stuffed trout and an excellent selection of steaks and prime rib. You'll dine in a relaxed atmosphere in the multi-level dining room. Accented with impressive sculptures, wall hangings and paintings, there's also large tables and comfortable seats which will make your meal even more enjoyable.

Located at 2855 N. Milwaukee Ave. in Northbrook, Allgauer's is two blocks south of Willow Road. Reservations are recommended on weekends.

Powerful queen stalking weak king a bad mismatch

By the standards prevailing on the chessboard, the powers of the queen are immense while the king, its natural prey, is not only vulnerable but weak.

Thus, a queen versus an exposed king is an unsightly and barbaric mismatch. With the slightest help, the queen is capable of administering a quick and easy checkmate.

In a recent game from the U.S.S.R. Championship, Kupreichik vs. Belyavsky, we are presented with a variety of such mates effectively used as threats.

Diagram 1 shows us a near material balance but strategically white is ahead hands down. The queen, pawns and white king are placed better than the black king, which is exposed, and the black rooks, which can only cling to each other in mutual protection.

WHITE'S PIECES, in fact, are in the process of using mate possibilities to set free the white pawns on the queen side. In fact, Kupreichik has just initiated that attack with the happy resource 1. P-N4 check. Whatever Belyavsky chooses, capture of either pawn or flight of his king, the few white pieces will exact their toll.

For example, if black plays 1... KxNP, white has a mate in two: i.e. 2. Q-QH3 check, KxP; 3. Q-B3 mate. (Diagram 2) threatens 3. Q-B3 mate, and will mate in two more moves if black now tries to flee, i.e. 2... K-Q5; 3. Q-K3 check, K-B5; and 4. Q-B3 mate.

Black chose his best option, 1... K-Q5, but white has another mate threat to sew things up. Kupreichik played 2. Q-Q8! Diagram 3. The threat is 3. Q-B4 mate and black's position will be wrecked.

DESPERATELY, Belyavsky tried 2... K-K5. White then exacted his tribute with 3. QxP check and a few moves later won the other black queenside pawn. Faced with the inevitable white queenside pawn juggernaut, black resigned.

Another example of queen mating powers (this time with a knight) took place in Diagram 4. Black, though a piece ahead, is utterly lost. For 1. N-B6 check knows no answer. But white, the sensational young Tony Miles, has a bonus threat: i.e. 1. R-B7!, KxR; and 2. QxP mate. An esthetic result!

Basman resigned and avoided both results.

It is easy to compose your own queen-and-pawn(s) or queen-and-piece vs. king positions. Both children and adults can improve their powers of calculation and visualization by attempting their solutions.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Use logic in defensive puzzle

If you can keep from looking at the South and East hands, you can enjoy an interesting defensive problem. It is simple enough, so we feel certain that any one of the 50 best players in the world will be able to easily solve it, provided they are playing with an equally expert partner.

You open the five of clubs. Your partner wins with the ace. South plays the jack and your partner shifts to the king of diamonds. South drops the six and you play the seven. Your partner leads the five of diamonds to your ace while South follows with the eight.

A review of the bidding shows that South must hold three spades and six hearts. He has played three minor suit cards and his unknown card will be either a low club or the four of diamonds.

You are slightly annoyed when you note that North really should have bid four spades, which would have left the South hand exposed. Then you make the right play. What was it?

You lead the deuce of diamonds, because you know your fine partner would have led the queen of diamonds, if he held five cards in that suit so as to hold the lead and play a club himself.

MARVEL MYSTERY OIL

WHAT IT IS

A specially formulated, high film strength oil which coats and protects valves, stems and guides and gives a better ring seal when added to gasoline. When added to crankcase oils, it improves their viscosity and clings to all moving parts while it reduces acid and sludge formation.

WHAT IT DOES

- Assures greater gasoline mileage
- Lengthens spark plug life
- Prevents sludge, gum and varnish formation
- Prevents sticky valves and rings
- Prevents engine wear due to high heat
- Improves compression
- Assures a cleaner running engine all year

by STIRLING MORITA and JOHN MAES

Victoria Strecker, 65, had been taking stray dogs and cats into her home for years because she didn't have the heart to turn them away. Friday she wept as county rabies-control officers hauled away more than 80 of them to be destroyed.

Animal-welfare and County Rabies Control workers dragged out about 25 cats, which were kept in homemade cages, and about 58 sickly dogs, many without their fur. The animals were loaded into trucks. Allen Glisch, certified investigator for Rabies Control, said he believed that as many as 95 per cent of the animals would have to be "euthanized."

Mrs. Strecker, 65, while standing outside her refuse-filled back stairway at 8000 Ballard Rd., Maine Township, said she had been keeping dogs and cats for about 16 years. She said she took the animals in because she did not "have the heart" to turn them loose. Some people brought them to her and others just abandoned them on her property.

"I couldn't throw them out," she explained. "I haven't got the heart. I'd rather throw a human being out."

She estimated she spent an average of about $150 a month to take care of the dogs and cats and fed them milk and dried and canned food.

When asked why the dogs were in such poor health, she replied that she did not have much time to take care of the animals because she works during the day as a housemaid. She and her daughter live in the home, which is isolated from nearby apartment buildings. She said her house was licensed with the county as an animal shelter.

THE DOGS AND cats were turned over to the rabies-control department and were being inspected. Glisch said many of them were suffering from wretched conditions caused by poor sanitation. He said the dogs were suffering mostly from neglect and that some had worms and other parasites.

Assistant State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, head of the 3rd Municipal District office, said there were some indications that the dogs had been kept in the home for as long as one year.

Glisch said, "The woman did not intend to be cruel. She wouldn't take them to a vet because he would euthanize them. So she made her self-styled animal shelter."

Treasure hunt? In the river?

If the Des Plaines IS hiding $40,000, he intends to find it

by LUISA GINETTI

Figure it this way. If Jim Reinecke is right, there's $40,000 in cash hidden in the mud beneath the Des Plaines River. It's a gamble, but Reinecke thinks he knows where there's a small fortune buried by someone who may have gotten it on payment for an art theft in Chicago perhaps three years ago.

Reinecke, 22, of 1275 Lee St., Des Plaines, believes he found a long-forgotten key to the treasure Friday morning while cleaning out a motel room in the DeVille Motel. And, let's face it — for Jim Reinecke and almost everyone else, $40,000 is worth a gamble.

So, Reinecke and two companions will be digging off the shores of the river in the Forest Preserve east of River Road today at 10 a.m. with the blessing of forest preserve officials, who will be on hand to supervise.

THE KEY IS A LETTER, partially destroyed and browned with age, that describes the location of a buried strongbox that contains $40,000 in small bills. The letter, which included a list of serial numbers for the bills, says the money was payment in connection with the art theft.

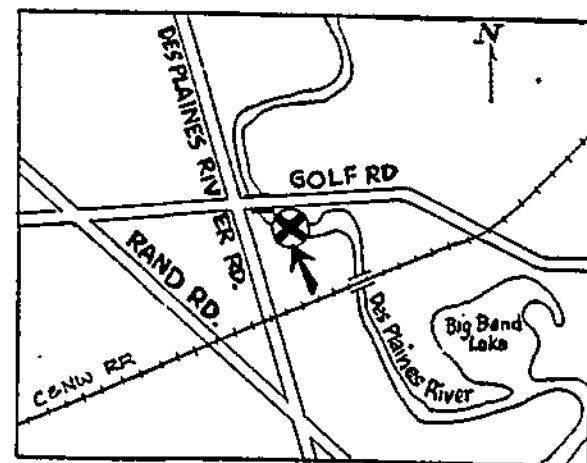

"The top part of the letter was missing, so there was no date on it and I couldn't make out the name at the bottom," Reinecke said. "It caught my attention because of the list of serial numbers on it and it mentioned the location where this guy had buried what sounded like his share of the take."

Reinecke said the letter indicated that the writer had buried the money so he wouldn't be caught with it. "It sounded like the guy was bragging about the case as if he was the mastermind behind it but it didn't mention when the theft took place." He said the name of the Art Institute of Chicago was mentioned in the letter but no specific reference to the date of a possible theft was made.

Reinecke said he burned the letter because he didn't want anyone else to find it. "I have a habit of leaving things around."

He contacted the local FBI office in Des Plaines, where agents said the only recent area art theft they could recall was from a church in Chicago about three years ago.

WHEN REINECKE went to the Des Plaines police to ask their help in locating the money, they said he would have to (Continued on Page 4)

DONALD RUMSFELD

by BOB LAHEY

Donald Rumsfeld defended the economic policies of his President and immediate boss Friday night by describing President Ford's proposed tax cut as the best way out of the economic dilemma facing the country.

The former Northwest suburban Congressman and now close advisor to Ford, said the tax cut is "the most rapid way to stimulate the economy."

Rumsfeld declared that an immediate tax cut would "give the people the choice of how to spend their money."

Rumsfeld dodged a question about recent reports that his successor in the U.S. House, Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, had refused to sign a Republican petition vowing support of President Ford. Questioned about Crane's refusal, Rumsfeld replied, "I do not know the details of the position but from what I read, Phil Crane has his reasons and I thought he explained his reasons in an acceptable manner."

CRANE AND U.S. Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-4th, of suburban Flossmoor, were the only two Illinois members of Congress who declined to sign a statement of Republican party solidarity presented by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Rep. John Anderson, R-16th, of Rockford. Crane has said he considered it unnecessary to reaffirm his dedication to GOP principals.

Rumsfeld was billed as the star of the Republican Conference Friday at the Regency Hyatt House near O'Hare International Airport, but other GOP luminaries included Percy, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott, State Comptroller George Lindburg, State Republican Chairman Donald Adams and Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Although Rumsfeld has been portrayed as Ford's closest adviser, he was reluctant to discuss pending issues Friday night. When asked about President Ford's attitude on foreign aid to the failing Cambodian government, Rumsfeld replied he had not discussed the matter with the President.

80 diseased animals found in woman's home 'kennel'

FACING AUTHORITIES, Victoria Strecker tells how she turned her basement into a homemade kennel for stray dogs and cats she "didn't have the heart" to let go. She said she had been taking in animals for 16 years.

Strecker would be criminally charged under the cruelty-to-animals statute, but noted that the details of the case would be submitted to a judge on Monday.

WORKERS COVERED their noses as they led the animals from the stench of manure and urine in the basement. The aroma was similar to ammonia.

County authorities were notified of the situation by a furnace repairman who had come to the home a few days earlier. The state's attorney's office took out a search warrant and entered the Strecker home at about 3:30 p.m.

One of the first men on the scene, Guy Johansen of the rabies-control unit, said "I'd never seen anything like it before. When I came into the basement there were dogs all over the place."

A neighborhood youth, Garry Hallinton, 15, of 8894 Knight, said he had ventured near the house a few times in the past, but that he was told to leave or he'd be arrested for trespassing.

GLISCH SAID he had seen worse situations in his 31 years of investigating animal welfare.

Mrs. Strecker said that among her dogs were three chihuahuas and five pedigree dogs. "I don't get no money from nobody," she added when asked if anyone helped her pay for feeding the animals.

She kept the dogs in cages when they were in heat, but purchased birth-control pills from a veterinarian to keep them from breeding, Mrs. Strecker said. A wooden shed in back of the house was heated and often used as a kennel, she added.

She also said she would continue to take in dogs and cats though authorities have taken most of them away. Six healthy dogs were returned to Mrs. Strecker.

She cried as she described how she came home shortly after 3:30 p.m. and authorities already had entered the building to take the dogs out.

Several trustees back construction-site inspections

by TOM VON MALDER

Several Wheeling village trustees said Friday they favor inspections of construction sites reportedly not inspected as required during the administration of former building director William Bieber.

Each trustee, however, said he would want the village's legal position determined before ordering such inspections.

"I'd like to have it," Trustee Ronald Bruhn said of the inspections. He added though that he was unsure what the village could legally do in the matter.

"They (village building inspectors) ought to go back to see if there is any danger to life-safety," Bruhn said.

A COMPREHENSIVE management study of village government in Wheeling, delivered to the village this week and obtained by The Herald cited reports of "occasionally called off" inspections of construction sites.

Abuses in both the inspection and zoning area during Bieber's employment were cited by the report, prepared by Yarger and Associates, Falls Church, Va. "Interviews by the survey staff with inspectors disclosed that inspections were occasionally called off on construction sites where it was assumed a particular contractor had an interest," the report said. "In other instances recommendations made for corrective measures were either ignored or reversed by the former building official."

Trustee John Koeppen said Friday he "naturally would favor" inspections of any construction sites that had not been inspected properly. He added though that even if some fault were found with a site, the village might not be able to do anything since building permits already had been issued. "We could be sued by the developer," he said, if the village tried to stop a project already approved.

Trustee Albert Lang also said the village's legal position should be determined first. He said he believes the sites probably were inspected though, even if it wasn't by the building department inspectors. He said his "impression" was that Bieber made the inspections.

THERE COULD be a problem too with what was not inspected, Trustee William Hein said. If the work was underground, he said, the village is not about to dig up a foundation or water and sewer system, he said.

Three of the four trustees contacted said they agreed with the recommendation that Bieber's replacement be selected from outside the village "to avoid any possible previous political links," as stated in the report. Both Lang and Koeppen said they expected that recommendation and Hein said he "was hoping" for it. Bruhn said he hadn't come to that part of the report yet.

The building director post has been filled on an interim basis since Bieber's resignation by Robert Kaminski, who has done a "credible job" according to the report. Bieber resigned last June after pleading guilty to extortion, perjury and tax charges in connection with a builder shakedown scandal.

The trustees also generally agreed with the report's recommendation that Village Mgr. George Passolt delegate more authority to department level officials so that he will be freed to handle administrative matters more.

HEIN SAID he has been saying Passolt needs help for two years and Koeppen said, "We agreed to that a long time ago." Koeppen added that if the village could find the money to hire the personnel needed to aid Passolt, he would be

"all for it" and would try to include such items as part of the 1975-76 village budget.

Lang agreed with the report's recommendation that a committee be set up to form priorities in helping Passolt and other matters covered in the report. "We should not go at this haphazardly," he said.

Lang did say he felt Passolt's office "could be expanded," perhaps by the addition of more clerical help.

The report stated Passolt spends "nearly half his time" on matters that should be delegated to other staff members. It cited Passolt's frequent work at night and on weekends "to keep abreast of the voluminous details handled."

Among the report's recommendations for aiding Passolt were an organizational restructuring of staff functions and creation of new departments, including a finance department and a community development department.

Trustees Edward Berger and Donald Jackson and Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon could not be reached for comment Friday.

State investigates Orchard fire

Investigation of Sunday's fire, which left as many as 24 families homeless in the Orchard Apartments near Wheeling, has been turned over to the State Fire Marshal's office. Sheriff's police also are investigating the storage room fire.

The fire, at 832 Cider Ln., was the fourth in the complex in 16 months and all four were "similar in nature," Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen said. Sunday's fire was confined to the storage room, but dense smoke affected 8 to 12 apartments and as many as 24 apartments were left without electricity.

The cause of the fire remains undetermined.

Koeppen said a fire of this type is easy to start because of the amount of combustible material found in storage areas. "It is hard to say if it is of suspicious origin or if it was an accident," he added.

Commenting on a similar storage room fire Thursday at the Jefferson Square Apartments in Elk Grove Village, Koeppen said that hopefully future exchanges of information about suspicious fires between fire departments might yield clues to determining the fires' cause. Koeppen indicated there was little way of determining if the Wheeling and Elk Grove Village fires were connected.

Tax cut 'most rapid way to stimulate economy'

by BOB LAHEY

Donald Rumsfeld defended the economic policies of his President and immediate boss Friday night by describing President Ford's proposed tax cut as the best way out of the economic dilemma facing the country.

The former Northwest suburban Congressman and now close adviser to Ford, said the tax cut is "the most rapid way to stimulate the economy."

Rumsfeld declared that an immediate tax cut would "give the people the choice of how to spend their money."

Rumsfeld dodged a question about recent reports that his successor in the U.S. House, Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, had refused to sign a Republican petition vowing support of President Ford. Questioned about Crane's refusal, Rumsfeld replied, "I do not know the details of the position but from what I read, Phil Crane has his reasons and I thought he explained his reasons in an acceptable manner."

CRANE AND U.S. Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-4th, of suburban Flossmoor, were the only two Illinois members of Congress who declined to sign a statement of Republican party solidarity presented by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Rep. John Anderson, R-16th, of Rockford. Crane has said he considered it unnecessary to reaffirm his dedication to GOP principals.

Rumsfeld was billed as the star of the Republican Conference Friday at the Regency Hyatt House near O'Hare International Airport, but other GOP luminaries included Percy, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott, State Comptroller George Lindburg, State Republican Chairman Donald Adams and Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Caroy.

Although Rumsfeld has been portrayed as Ford's closest adviser, he was reluctant to discuss pending issues Friday night. When asked about President Ford's attitude on foreign aid to the failing Cambodian government, Rumsfeld replied he had not discussed the matter with the President.

Treasure hunt? In the river?

If the Des Plaines IS hiding $40,000, he intends to find it

by LUISA GINETTI

Figure it this way. If Jim Reinecke is right, there's $40,000 in cash hidden in the mud beneath the Des Plaines River.

It's a gamble, but Reinecke thinks he knows where there's a small fortune buried by someone who may have gotten it on payment for an art theft in Chicago perhaps three years ago.

Reinecke, 22, of 1275 Lee St., Des Plaines, believes he found a long-forgotten key to the treasure Friday morning while cleaning out a motel room in the DeVille Motel. And, let's face it — for Jim Reinecke and almost everyone else, $40,000 is worth a gamble.

So, Reinecke and two companions will be digging off the shores of the river in the Forest Preserve east of River Road today at 10 a.m. with the blessing of forest preserve officials, who will be on hand to supervise.

THE KEY IS A LETTER, partially destroyed and browned with age, that describes the location of a buried strongbox that contains $40,000 in small bills. The letter, which included a list of serial numbers for the bills, says the money was payment in connection with the art theft.

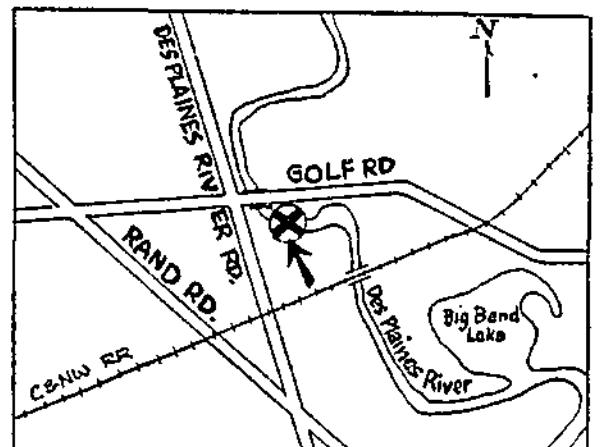

"The top part of the letter was missing, so there was no date on it and I couldn't make out the name at the bottom," Reinecke said. "It caught my attention because of the list of serial numbers on it and it mentioned the location where this guy had buried what sounded like his share of the take."

Reinecke said the letter indicated that the writer had buried the money so he wouldn't be caught with it. "It sounded like the guy was bragging about the case as if he was the mastermind behind it but it didn't mention when the theft took place." He said the name of the Art Institute of Chicago was mentioned in the letter but no specific reference to the date of a possible theft was made.

Reinecke said he burned the letter because he didn't want anyone else to find it. "I have a habit of leaving things around."

He contacted the local FBI office in Des Plaines, where agents said the only recent area art theft they could recall was from a church in Chicago about three years ago.

FACING AUTHORITIES, Victoria Strecker tells how she turned her basement into a homemade kennel for stray dogs and cats she "didn't have the heart" to let go. She said she had been taking in animals for 16 years.

Strecker would be criminally charged under the cruelty-to-animals statute, but noted that the details of the case would be submitted to a judge on Monday.

WORKERS COVERED their noses as they led the animals from the stench of manure and urine in the basement. The aroma was similar to ammonia.

County authorities were notified of the situation by a furnace repairman who had come to the home a few days earlier. The state's attorney's office took out a search warrant and entered the Strecker home at about 3:30 p.m.

One of the first men on the scene, Guy Johansen of the rabies-control unit, said "I'd never seen anything like it before. When I came into the basement there were dogs all over the place."

A neighborhood youth, Garry Hallington, 15, of 8894 Knight, said he had ventured near the house a few times in the past, but that he was told to leave or he'd be arrested for trespassing.

GLASCH SAID he had seen worse situations in his 31 years of investigating animal welfare.

Mrs. Strecker said that among her dogs were three chihuahuas and five pedigree dogs. "I don't get no money from nobody," she added when asked if anyone helped her pay for feeding the animals.

She kept the dogs in cages when they were in heat, but purchased birth-control pills from a veterinarian to keep them from breeding, Mrs. Strecker said. A wooden shed in back of the house was heated and often used as a kennel, she added.

She also said she would continue to take in dogs and cats though authorities have taken most of them away. Six healthy dogs were returned to Mrs. Strecker.

She cried as she described how she came home shortly after 3:30 p.m. and authorities already had entered the building to take the dogs out.

Headache No. 1975—when a city moves to a new home

Moving day always is a hassle, but when the shifting involves the transfer of an entire city government from one office to another the headaches are multiplied.

Des Plaines will be faced with just this situation Thursday when city offices, now scattered at varied downtown locations, become consolidated in the new civic center.

"Moving into a new building creates a number of problems, some of which are just inconveniences," Mayor Herbert Behrel told the employees Friday. The biggest problem, he said, will be providing parking for employees since no parking deck for the civic center has been built.

Behrel told the group they can expect to park in area parking lots for at least another year because it will take that long before space behind the civic center becomes available.

THE MAYOR ADDED that the need for security in the building is very important and for this reason only the main counter on the first floor will be open during the noon hour and visitors will not be allowed upstairs during this time. Behrel said the building will be supervised when it is open and locked on weekends and holidays when it is closed.

The most fascinating change confronting employees is their new phone system, which will include touch-tone phones throughout the building and innovations which were not available to them before.

Two representatives from Central Illinois Telephone Co. explained the system Friday and pointed out such features as transferring calls, how to get an outside line and how to have a three-man conference call.

The city office will have a new phone number, 297-1200, which will be in effect Thursday. Various departments also will have direct night numbers to be published later for calls coming in after 5 p.m.

Behrel said he is pleased with the building and believes the employees will feel the same. "The surroundings are excellent and lend themselves to pleasant working conditions. It's a building you will be proud of."

2 more enter, 8 seeking two seats on Oakton board

Former Illinois Senate candidate Patton Feichter and a 30-year-old Chicago teacher Friday became the seventh and eighth candidates running for the two three-year seats on the Oakton Community College board of trustees April 12.

Feichter, 30, of 9121 Potter Rd., Des Plaines, was defeated by State Sen. John Nimrod, R-Skokie, in the November election for the Fourth Legislative District. Feichter, a Democrat, also was an unsuccessful candidate for the Oakton board in 1973. He is a teacher at Maine South High School.

David Laske, 30, of 6851 Colveland St., Niles, is a Chicago teacher. He said he decided to run for the board because "I am concerned about the location of the college site and also by the role of student organizations at the college." The college site, located in Des Plaines, has been a source of controversy for residents of Niles Township, who say the site is too far from their area.

Feichter was unavailable for comment on his candidacy Friday. In 1973, however, Feichter said more vocational programs were needed at the college.

Other candidates for the board are Fred Swannerton, 400 Courtland, Park Ridge; Celeste Smith, 4824 Kirk, Skokie; incumbent Vivian Medak, 6820 Kostner, Lincolnwood; Lee Prince, 6524 Trumbull, Skokie; and John Prochaska, 504 N. Redfield Ct., Park Ridge.

Filing for the election will continue through March 21. Candidates for the board must be 21 years old and residents of the district.

Erbach names Keane campaign chairman

Alb Arthur Erbach, 5th Ward, has named Ed Keane, 208 Webster Ln., as his campaign chairman for his reelection bid. Erbach is unopposed.

Other members of the committee to reelect Erbach are Gloria Keane, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Morova, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Battista, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Denny, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Barry and Priscilla Berg.

by STYLING MORITA and JOHN MAES
Victoria Strecker, 63, had been taking stray dogs and cats into her home for years because she didn't have the heart to turn them away. Friday she wept as county rabies-control officers hauled away more than 80 of them to be destroyed.
Animal-welfare and County Rabies Control workers dragged out about 25 cats, which were kept in homemade cages, and about 30 sickly dogs, many without their fur. The animals were loaded into trucks. Allen Gilsch, certified investigator for Rabies Control, said he

Mrs. Strecker, while standing outside her refuse-filled back stairway at 8000 Bollard Rd., Maine Township, said she had been keeping dogs and cats for about 16 years. She said she took the animals in because she did not "have the heart" to turn them loose. Some people brought them to her and others just abandoned them on her property.
"I couldn't throw them out," she explained. "I haven't got the heart. I'd rather throw a human being out."
She estimated she spent an average of about $150 a month to take care of the dogs and cats and fed them milk and dried and canned food.

When asked why the dogs were in such poor health, she replied that she did not have much time to take care of the animals because she works during the day as a housemaid. She and her daughter live in the home, which is isolated from nearby apartment buildings. She said her house was licensed with the county as an animal shelter.
THE DOGS AND cats were turned over to the rabies-control department and were being inspected. Gilsch said many of them were suffering from wretched conditions caused by poor sanitation. He said the dogs were suffering mostly from neglect and that some had worms and other parasites.

Assistant State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, head of the 3rd Municipal District office, said there were some indications that the dogs had been kept in the home for as long as one year.
Gilsch said, "The woman did not intend to be cruel. She wouldn't take them to a vet because he would euthanize them. So she made her self-styled animal shelter."

Advice offered on 9-hole golf course

A Palatine golf course architect has offered the Elk Grove Park District free advice on the feasibility of constructing a nine-hole, par-3 golf course along Salt Creek in Elk Grove Village.

The park district is researching the idea of building the course on about 40 acres along the creek between Clearmont Drive and Walnut Lane. The land is owned by the park district and the village.

Park Board Pres. Lew Smith said Friday the Palatine architect has agreed to look at the site and give his opinion on whether the land is suitable for a course without charge. Smith said he, the architect and John Schaefer, superintendent of parks, will inspect the site "sometime next week."

SMITH AND Roland Schapanski, park district architect, have drawn up a preliminary sketch of the proposed course, with holes ranging in length from 135 to 200 yards laid out around the park district baseball diamond, football field, J. Sterling Morton Arboretum and ice skating rinks already in the area.

The main purpose of calling in the golf course expert, Smith said, is to get his opinion on whether the course as it is planned would fit on the site. Also, he added, park officials are concerned about the safety of surrounding home owners.

"If he says it looks good, then we'll go ahead with a complete study of the project," Smith said. "We especially want the architect's opinion on the safety factor because it is a little snug to those homes. If he feels it's too close, we'll have to drop the idea."

Some park commissioners not favoring the proposed golf course because of possible hazards to the residential area have called for a second opinion by another golf course expert. Smith said he already has received a letter from one homeowner expressing concern.

THE PARK BOARD president has estimated that it will take at least a year, possibly two, to complete the necessary land surveys and studies of the projected operating costs of the golf course before construction could begin.

The proposed golf course site is in a marshy area of the village that often floods, making the Upper Salt Creek Watershed flood control project important to the park district's plans.

Construction of the golf course may hinge on whether the watershed project could minimize flooding at the site enough to make it usable throughout the warm-weather months.

The Elk Grove Village Junior Women's Club is sponsoring a conservation poster contest.

"Conservation: Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow," is the theme selected by the conservation committee for the contest. The contest is open to all students in Elk Grove Village in first through eighth grade.

Entries will be judged by a panel of art teachers, headed by Forman Onderdonk, art supervisor of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. There will be one winner in each division: Grades 1-2; Grades 3-4; Grades 5-6; and Grades 7-8. Each entrant will receive a certificate of merit. First place posters will be displayed at the library.

Poster contest rules specify each entry may be on any color poster board, 12 inches by 18 inches, any medium may be used, chalk, crayon, paint, string, paper or cloth.

Citizen of Year nominations open

Nominations are being accepted for the Elk Grove Village Jaycees' "Citizen of the Year" award.

Award chairman Fred Crone said any resident who has made an outstanding contribution to the community is eligible.

Those making nominations are asked to mail them to Mike Erbach, 333 Kingsbridge, Elk Grove Village. Deadline for nomination is April 19.

Nominees will be screened by a panel of judges composed of community leaders and Jaycees, Erbach said.

Finalists will be honored at the Jaycees' "Elk Grove Village Awards Banquet" May 16, when the award winner will be announced. That evening the Jaycees also will honor a senior citizen and an educator.

Ticket reservations or information may be obtained by contacting Bob Godek, 437-3882.

Parks offer work to college students

The Elk Grove Village Park District will hire college students to work for the district part-time throughout the year, sharing the cost of their salaries with the Chicago Urban Corp.

Park Supt. Jack Claes said the Chicago Urban Corp. in cooperation with a federal work-study program, places college students and pays 80 per cent of their salaries.

"We will be required to pay approximately $12.50 a week or 30 per cent of the salary of each employee we hire," Claes said. He added that the park district pays 30 per cent of the salary, with the extra 10 per cent going back to the Chicago Urban Corp. for its placement and operating expenses.

Claes said the work corp draws upon the resources of 50 colleges in the Greater Chicago area.

He said he expects to interview students from Harper College, Palatine, and other nearby colleges and already has interviewed one prospective employee who is working on a master's degree in urban development.

"I mention this because it is not just young persons who will be applying but students of all ages with many skills," Claes said.

Claes received park commissioners' approval Thursday to participate in the program. He plans to hire one person initially to work in the office on various studies.

Animal-welfare and County Rabies Control workers dragged out about 25 cats, which were kept in homemade cages, and about 50 sickly dogs, many without their fur. The animals were loaded into trucks. Allen Glisch, certified investigator for Rabies Control, said he believed that as many as 95 per cent of the animals would have to be "euthanized."

Mrs. Strecker, while standing outside her refuse-filled back stairway at 8600 Ballard Rd., Maine Township, said she had been keeping dogs and cats for about 16 years. She said she took the animals in because she did not "have the heart" to turn them loose. Some people brought them to her and others just abandoned them on her property.

"I couldn't throw them out," she explained. "I haven't got the heart. I'd rather throw a human being out."

She estimated she spent an average of about $150 a month to take care of the dogs and cats and fed them milk and dried and canned food.

When asked why the dogs were in such poor health, she replied that she did not have much time to take care of the animals because she works during the day as a housemaid. She and her daughter live in the home, which is isolated from nearby apartment buildings. She said her house was licensed with the county as an animal shelter.

DONALD RUMSFELD

by BOB LAHEY

Donald Rumsfeld defended the economic policies of his President and immediate boss Friday night by describing President Ford's proposed tax cut as the best way out of the economic dilemma facing the country.

The former Northwest suburban Congressman and now close adviser to Ford, said the tax cut is "the most rapid way to stimulate the economy."

Rumsfeld declared that an immediate tax cut would "give the people the choice of how to spend their money."

Rumsfeld dodged a question about recent reports that his successor in the U.S. House, Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, had refused to sign a Republican petition vowing support of President Ford. Questioned about Crane's refusal, Rumsfeld replied, "I do not know the details of the position but from what I read, Phil Crane has his reasons and I thought he explained his reasons in an acceptable manner."

CRANE AND U.S. Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-4th, of suburban Flossmoor, were the only two Illinois members of Congress who declined to sign a statement of Republican party solidarity presented by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Rep. John Anderson, R-16th, of Rockford. Crane has said he considered it unnecessary to reaffirm his dedication to GOP principals.

Rumsfeld was billed as the star of the Republican Conference Friday at the Regency Hyatt House near O'Hare International Airport, but other GOP luminaries included Percy, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott, State Comptroller George Lindburg, State Republican Chairman Donald Adams and Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Although Rumsfeld has been portrayed as Ford's closest adviser, he was reluctant to discuss pending issues Friday night. When asked about President Ford's attitude on foreign aid to the failing Cambodian government, Rumsfeld replied he had not discussed the matter with the President.

Treasure hunt? In the river?

If the Des Plaines IS hiding $40,000, he intends to find it

by LUISA GINETTI

Figure it this way. If Jim Reinecke is right, there's $40,000 in cash hidden in the mud beneath the Des Plaines River. It's a gamble, but Reinecke thinks he knows where there's a small fortune buried by someone who may have gotten it on payment for an art theft in Chicago perhaps three years ago.

Reinecke, 22, of 1275 Lee St., Des Plaines, believes he found a long-forgotten key to the treasure Friday morning while cleaning out a motel room in the DeVille Motel. And, let's face it — for Jim Reinecke and almost everyone else, $40,000 is worth a gamble.

So, Reinecke and two companions will be digging off the shores of the river in the Forest Preserve east of River Road today at 10 a.m. with the blessing of forest preserve officials, who will be on hand to supervise.

THE KEY IS A LETTER, partially destroyed and browned with age, that describes the location of a buried strongbox that contains $40,000 in small bills. The letter, which included a list of serial numbers for the bills, says the money was payment in connection with the art theft.

"The top part of the letter was missing, so there was no date on it and I couldn't make out the name at the bottom," Reinecke said. "It caught my attention because of the list of serial numbers on it and it mentioned the location where this guy had buried what sounded like his share of the take."

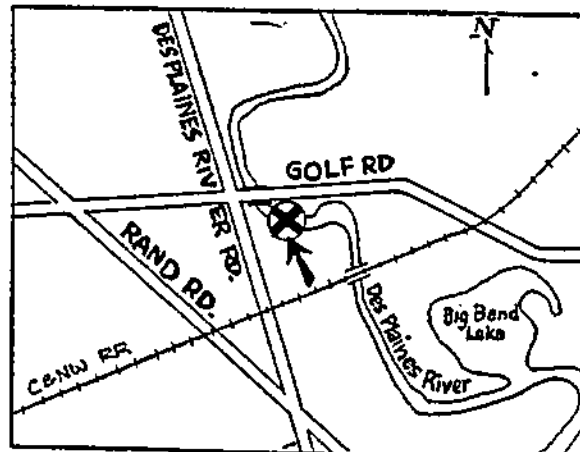

Reinecke said the letter indicated that the writer had buried the money so he wouldn't be caught with it. "It sounded like the guy was bragging about the case as if he was the mastermind behind it but it didn't mention when the theft took place." He said the name of the Art Institute of Chicago was mentioned in the letter but no specific reference to the date of a possible theft was made.

Reinecke said he burned the letter because he didn't want anyone else to find it. "I have a habit of leaving things around."

He contacted the local FBI office in Des Plaines, where agents said the only recent area art theft they could recall was from a church in Chicago about three years ago.

WHEN REINECKE went to the Des Plaines police to ask their help in locating the money, they said he would have to FACING AUTHORITIES. Victoria Strecker tells how she turned her basement into a homemade kennel for stray dogs and cats she "didn't have the heart" to let go. She said she had been taking in animals for 16 years.

Strecker would be criminally charged under the cruelty-to-animals statute, but noted that the details of the case would be submitted to a judge on Monday.

WORKERS COVERED their noses as they led the animals from the stench of manure and urine in the basement. The aroma was similar to ammonia.

County authorities were notified of the situation by a furnace repairman who had come to the home a few days earlier. The state's attorney's office took out a search warrant and entered the Strecker home at about 3:30 p.m.

One of the first men on the scene, Guy Johansen of the rabies-control unit, said "I'd never seen anything like it before. When I came into the basement there were dogs all over the place."

A neighborhood youth, Garry Hallinton, 15, of 8394 Knight, said he had ventured near the house a few times in the past, but that he was told to leave or he'd be arrested for trespassing.

GLISCH SAID he had seen worse situations in his 31 years of investigating animal welfare.

Mrs. Strecker said that among her dogs were three chihuahuas and five pedigree dogs. "I don't get no money from nobody," she added when asked if anyone helped her pay for feeding the animals.

She kept the dogs in cages when they were in heat, but purchased birth-control pills from a veterinarian to keep them from breeding, Mrs. Strecker said. A wooden shed in back of the house was heated and often used as a kennel, she added.

She also said she would continue to take in dogs and cats though authorities have taken most of them away. Six healthy dogs were returned to Mrs. Strecker.

She cried as she described how she came home shortly after 3:30 p.m. and authorities already had entered the building to take the dogs out.

'Short-timer' Conroy keeps on pluggin'

by STIRLING MORITA

After Saturday, two days away from St. Patrick's Day, Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy becomes a "short-timer," though many village residents may think he has been around for a long time.

"Short-timer" in police jargon stands for the lucky policeman who has weathered it over the three-quarter hump toward collecting his police retirement pension. From Saturday on, it is all downhill for Conroy because it marks his 15th year as police chief in the fast-growing community.

"There have been the headaches, but it's also been fun," noted the cherub-faced Irishman. "Everything's changing. It is a very fast-moving community."

SINCE 1960, when Conroy ventured into the cornfields of Schaumburg after establishing the detective bureau for the Skokie Police Dept., he witnessed a rapid rise from a one-man department to a 47-man police force. The chief, teasingly called "Skip" (for his grade-school attendance record) by his close associates, has been in four different offices — with his last one still being constructed in the new police station scheduled for completion in about 18 months.

When Schaumburg was a tiny dot on the Chicagoland map (with a population of 800), Conroy became the village's top law enforcer. The village since has grown to include 36,944 residents, 26 square miles and the Woodfield Shopping Center.

Conroy has come a long way since the days when he shared a public toilet with a Western-style clothing store next to the rented one-room office used for police work, village meetings and a courtroom near Golf and Roselle roads.

Or the time he operated his two-man department out of a house garage at what is now 100 S. Springinguth Rd. There also was his office in the basement of the Great Hall — which he thought at one time might have been part of a cowpen. And when he first moved into his present office at the old village hall, the spring rains seeped through the wall and soaked his carpet.

CONROY HAS learned much in the 20½ years since he walked a beat as a Chicago patrolman in the Sheffield area. But what he is most concerned about today is the reputation of policemen.

"When I walked a beat, we had a much closer relationship with the public. There was no air-conditioning in those days and people used to sit out in front of their houses."

But now, the only time residents see a patrolman is when he is answering a call or issuing a traffic citation, Conroy said. And in each situation the citizen is already upset, and that does not help the reputation of police, he pointed out.

Public relations and police consultant programs with the youth in area schools are the "only ways to get back the reputation that has been in a sense shattered," Conroy added.

"There have been many, many areas of change since I started walking a beat," Conroy noted. "Your laws have changed the atmosphere of things."

CONROY BELIEVES that the downhill economy has been partly to blame for Schaumburg's rising crime rate and added that even newly appointed U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi said the economy had an effect on crime.

"The economy has a great bearing on our society and our police work," Conroy explained.

"I think our department has come a long way in a few years."

How does Conroy plan to spend his 15th anniversary — only five years away from retirement? In his office, clearing some of the paperwork from his desk.

'Home-like atmosphere'

A home for mentally-handicapped adults is under construction at 3250 S. Plum Grove Rd., Rolling Meadows, and is scheduled to open in June.

The facility — to be called Meadows — will offer "a normalized, home-like atmosphere for disabled adults who have been restricted to more institutionalized centers in the past," said Byrn Witt, center director and president of the Meadows Shelter Care Inc., owner of the center.

The one-story, ranch-style building, will provide living space for 94 adults mainly from the Northwest suburban area, Witt said.

There will be two residents in each furnished apartment, which will be equipped with bathroom, air conditioning and heating system and carpeting.

THE $1 MILLION 32,000 square foot facility will include a dining hall and a recreation room, in addition to offices for the professional counseling and medical staff which would be on duty at all hours, he said.

The center's 35 staff members will provide basic medical services, treatment, socialization and private counseling for the residents. Transportation, scheduled educational and social activities and meals will be provided, Witt said.

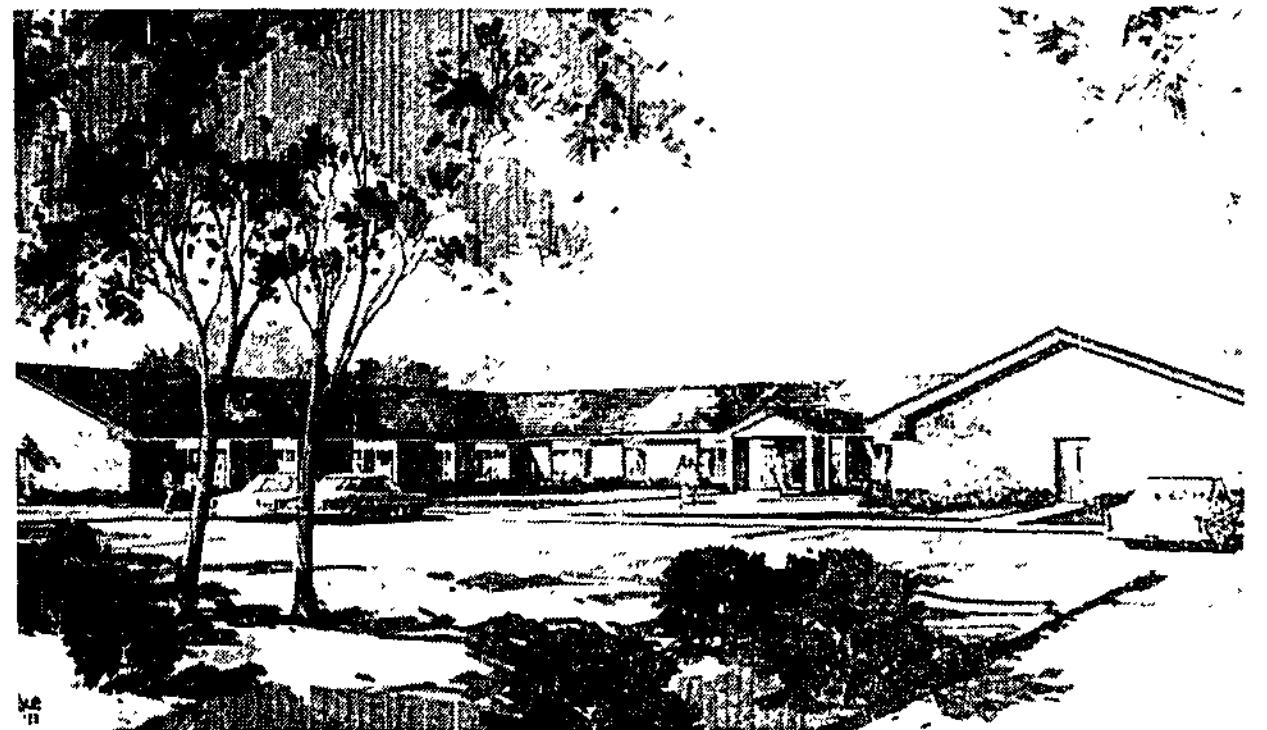

"The whole idea will be to make the residents more comfortable by being in a home-like setting. There will be private homes all around the center, and we hope the residents will be able to make use of all the community's facilities," Witt said.

The residents will attend area churches, shop in local shopping centers, and participate in local park district programs," said Witt, former director of the Clearbrook Center, Rolling Meadows.

MOST OF THE 2.5-acre site will be landscaped and used for outdoor activities. The center will "probably be filled to capacity within six months after it opens," Witt said.

"We are fortunate to be located in an area where residents have already come to accept and support rehabilitation centers that have been here for a while like Clearbrook and Countryside. Area residents will be able to accept these people as other residents," he said.

Free year of police protection?

Scanlan charges parks owe city $10,000

The Rolling Meadows Park District owes the City of Rolling Meadows $10,000 for police protection during fiscal 1974-75, Akl. Thomas Scanlan, 1st, said Friday.

But park officials and Mayor Roland J. Meyer deny the charge.

While Scanlan says the park district never revoked a contract it signed in 1973 for police protection, park officials and Meyer say the heavy police patrols called for in the 1973 contract no longer are needed or used, and that routine patrols of the parks are covered by an earlier ordinance.

Scanlan, chairman of the license, police, health and fire committee, said the city and the park district drew up a contract in 1973 to provide police protection for the park district. The city said the service would be worth $10,000, but Park Board Pres. Raymond Neukranz "pleaded a hardship," contending the district only could afford $3,000. Although Scanlan protested, the city council waived the $10,000 fee and provided free protection for the year.

SCANLAN SAID "no such resolution was approved for the 1974-75 fiscal year which began last May." Therefore, Scanlan said, because the contract still exists and because the city still is providing the service, the park district owes the city the $10,000. He said he intends to ask the park board for the money.

Park district officials say that the 1973 contract was set up for extra police duty at the sports complex, 3900 Owl Dr., but because the need for extra service no longer existed in 1974, no contract was drawn up for that year.

The park district has been receiving city police service since the early 1960s when a city ordinance was passed authorizing the enforcement of laws on park-district property. That service consisted of routine patrols through the parks and park buildings, Police Chief Lewis Case said. No contracts ever were drawn up, and no money changed hands for that service, he said.

In 1973, problems with youth at the sports complex forced the park district to hire private security guards, said Park Supt. Stephen Person. Problems with the authority of the guards soon forced the park district to begin hiring off-duty Rolling Meadows policemen to patrol the complex. By autumn of that year, the park district decided to seek a contract with the city for this increased policing of the parks, Person said.

BUT DIFFICULTIES at the sports complex died down and the park district did not request extra police patrols for 1974-75, Person said.

"When the contract ran out, the park board passed an ordinance giving the police authority to continue patrolling the parks. We didn't notify the police, because they assumed it was something that was part of their duties," Person said. "We're back into what we were doing before the contract. Why should we pay $10,000 for the same service we were getting for free?"

Apparently, the city forgot about the 1973 contract.

"I don't remember it coming up again last year (1974)," said City Mgr. James Watson. "Maybe it was an oversight on our part. It looks like we must have overlooked it. The park district must have gotten a year's protection for free," he added.

Meyer defended the park district's position saying, "When they want special patrols inside, that's when they have to contract." He confirmed that the 1974 situation at the sports complex was better than in 1973.

Scanlan said his committee will consider park district police protection at its April 10 meeting.

Victoria Strecker, 63, had been taking stray dogs and cats into her home for years because she didn't have the heart to turn them away. Friday she wept as county rabies-control officers hauled away more than 80 of them to be destroyed.

Animal-welfare and County Rabies Control workers dragged out about 25 cats, which were kept in homemade cages, and about 58 sickly dogs, many without their fur. The animals were loaded into trucks. Allen Glisch, certified investigator for Rabies Control, said he believed that as many as 95 per cent of the animals would have to be "euthanized."

Mrs. Strecker, while standing outside her refuse-filled back stairway at 8600 Ballard Rd., Maine Township, said she had been keeping dogs and cats for about 16 years. She said she took the animals in because she did not "have the heart" to turn them loose. Some people brought them to her and others just abandoned them on her property.

"I couldn't throw them out," she explained. "I haven't got the heart. I'd rather throw a human being out."

She estimated she spent an average of about $150 a month to take care of the dogs and cats and fed them milk and dried and canned food.

When asked why the dogs were in such poor health, she replied that she did not have much time to take care of the animals because she works during the day as a housemaid. She and her daughter live in the home, which is isolated from nearby apartment buildings. She said her house was licensed with the county as an animal shelter.

THE DOGS AND cats were turned over to the rabies-control department and were being inspected. Glisch said many of them were suffering from wretched conditions caused by poor sanitation. He said the dogs were suffering mostly from neglect and that some had worms and other parasites.

Assistant State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, head of the 3rd Municipal District office, said there were some indications that the dogs had been kept in the home for as long as one year.

Glisch said, "The woman did not intend to be cruel. She wouldn't take them to a vet because he would euthanize them. So she made her self-styled animal shelter."

Sullivan said he did not know if Mrs. (Continued on Page 5)

Ford policy 'best way out': Rumsfeld

by BOB LAHEY

Donald Rumsfeld defended the economic policies of his President and immediate boss Friday night by describing President Ford's proposed tax cut as the best way out of the economic dilemma facing the country.

The former Northwest suburban Congressman and now close adviser to Ford, said the tax cut is "the most rapid way to stimulate the economy."

Rumsfeld declared that an immediate tax cut would "give the people the choice of how to spend their money."

Rumsfeld dodged a question about recent reports that his successor in the U.S. House, Rep. Philip Crane, R-18th, had refused to sign a Republican petition vowing support of President Ford. Questioned about Crane's refusal, Rumsfeld replied, "I do not know the details of the position but from what I read, Phil Crane has his reasons and I thought he explained his reasons in an acceptable manner."

CRANE AND U.S. Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-4th, of suburban Flossmoor, were the only two Illinois members of Congress who declined to sign a statement of Republican party solidarity presented by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Rep. John Anderson, R-18th, of Rockford. Crane has said he considered it unnecessary to reaffirm his dedication to GOP principals.

Rumsfeld was billed as the star of the Republican Conference Friday at the Regency Hyatt House near O'Hare International Airport, but other GOP luminaries included Percy, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott, State Comptroller George Lindburg, State Republican Chairman Donald Adams and Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Although Rumsfeld has been portrayed as Ford's closest adviser, he was reluctant to discuss pending issues Friday night. When asked about President Ford's attitude on foreign aid to the falling Cambodian government, Rumsfeld replied he had not discussed the matter with the President.

Treasure hunt? In the river?

If the Des Plaines IS hiding
$40,000, he intends to find it

by LUISA GINETTI

Figure it this way. If Jim Reinecke is right, there's $40,000 in cash hidden in the mud beneath the Des Plaines River.

It's a gamble, but Reinecke thinks he knows where there's a small fortune buried by someone who may have gotten it on payment for an art theft in Chicago perhaps three years ago.

Reinecke, 22, of 1275 Lee St., Des Plaines, believes he found a long-forgotten key to the treasure Friday morning while cleaning out a motel room in the DeVille Motel. And, let's face it — for Jim Reinecke and almost everyone else, $40,000 is worth a gamble.

So, Reinecke and two companions will be digging off the shores of the river in the Forest Preserve east of River Road today at 10 a.m. with the blessing of forest preserve officials, who will be on hand to supervise.

THE KEY IS A LETTER, partially destroyed and browned with age, that describes the location of a buried strongbox that contains $40,000 in small bills. The letter, which included a list of serial numbers for the bills, says the money was payment in connection with the art theft.

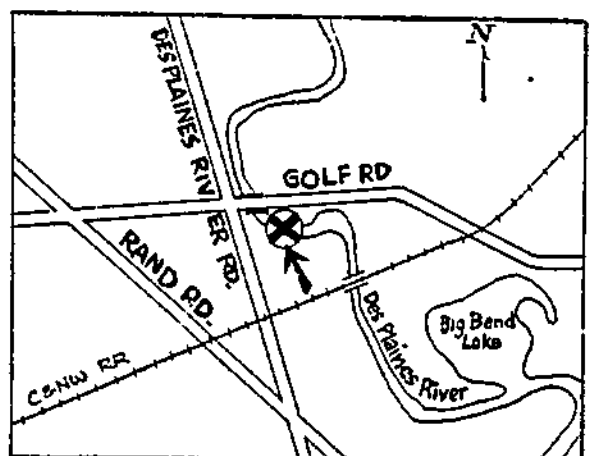

"The top part of the letter was missing, so there was no date on it and I couldn't make out the name at the bottom," Reinecke said. "It caught my attention because of the list of serial numbers on it and it mentioned the location where this guy had buried what sounded like his share of the take."

Reinecke said the letter indicated that the writer had buried the money so he wouldn't be caught with it. "It sounded like the guy was bragging about the case as if he was the mastermind behind it but it didn't mention when the theft took place." He said the name of the Art Institute of Chicago was mentioned in the letter, but no specific reference to the date of a possible theft was made.

Reinecke said he burned the letter because he didn't want anyone else to find it. "I have a habit of leaving things around."

He contacted the local FBI office in Des Plaines, where agents said the only recent area art theft they could recall was from a church in Chicago about three years ago.

FACING AUTHORITIES, Victoria Strecker tells how she turned her basement into a homemade kennel for stray dogs and cats she "didn't have the heart" to let go. She said she had been taking in animals for 16 years.

Strecker would be criminally charged under the cruelty-to-animals statute, but noted that the details of the case would be submitted to a judge on Monday.

WORKERS COVERED their noses as they led the animals from the stench of manure and urine in the basement. The aroma was similar to ammonia.

County authorities were notified of the situation by a furnace repairman who had come to the home a few days earlier. The state's attorney's office took out a search warrant and entered the Strecker home at about 3:30 p.m.

One of the first men on the scene, Guy Johansen of the rabies-control unit, said "I'd never seen anything like it before. When I came into the basement there were dogs all over the place."

A neighborhood youth, Garry Hallington, 15, of 8091 Knight, said he had ventured near the house a few times in the past, but that he was told to leave or he'd be arrested for trespassing.

GLISCH SAID he had seen worse situations in his 31 years of investigating animal welfare.

Mrs. Strecker said that among her dogs were three chihuahuas and five pedigree dogs. "I don't get no money from nobody," she added when asked if anyone helped her pay for feeding the animals.

She kept the dogs in cages when they were in heat, but purchased birth-control pills from a veterinarian to keep them from breeding, Mrs. Strecker said. A wooden shed in back of the house was heated and often used as a kennel, she added.

She also said she would continue to take in dogs and cats though authorities have taken most of them away. Six healthy dogs were returned to Mrs. Strecker.

She cried as she described how she came home shortly after 3:30 p.m. and authorities already had entered the building to take the dogs out.

'Home-like atmosphere'

Center for mentally impaired adults set to open in June

A home for mentally-handicapped adults is under construction at 3250 S. Plum Grove Rd., Rolling Meadows, and is scheduled to open in June.

The facility — to be called Meadows — will offer "a normalized, home-like atmosphere for disabled adults who have been restricted to more institutionalized centers in the past," said Byrn Witt, center director and president of the Meadows Shelter Care Inc., owner of the center.

The one-story, ranch-style building, will provide living space for 91 adults mainly from the Northwest suburban area, Witt said.

There will be two residents in each furnished apartment, which will be equipped with bathroom, air conditioning and heating system and carpeting.

THE $1 MILLION 32,000 square foot facility will include a dining hall and a recreation room, in addition to offices for the professional counseling and medical staff which would be on duty at all hours, he said.

The center's 35 staff members will provide basic medical services, treatment, socialization and private counseling for the residents. Transportation, scheduled educational and social activities and meals will be provided, Witt said.

"The whole idea will be to make the residents more comfortable by being in a home-like setting. There will be private homes all around the center, and we hope the residents will be able to make use of all the community's facilities," Witt said.

The residents will attend area churches, shop in local shopping centers, and participate in local park district programs," said Witt, former director of the Clearbrook Center, Rolling Meadows.

MOST OF THE 2.5-acre site will be landscaped and used for outdoor activities. The center will "probably be filled to capacity within six months after it opens," Witt said.

"We are fortunate to be located in an area where residents have already come to accept and support rehabilitation centers that have been here for a while like Clearbrook and Countryside. Area residents will be able to accept these people as other residents," he said.

Advice offered on 9-hole golf course

A Palatine golf course architect has offered the Elk Grove Park District free advice on the feasibility of constructing a nine-hole, par-3 golf course along Salt Creek in Elk Grove Village.

The park district is researching the idea of building the course on about 40 acres along the creek between Clearmont Drive and Walnut Lane. The land is owned by the park district and the village.

SMITH AND Roland Schapanski, park

district architect, have drawn up a preliminary sketch of the proposed course, with holes ranging in length from 135 to 200 yards laid out around the park district baseball diamond, football field, J. Sterling Morton Arboretum and ice skating rinks already in the area.

The main purpose of calling in the golf course expert, Smith said, is to get his opinion on whether the course as it is planned would fit on the site. Also, he added, park officials are concerned about the safety of surrounding homeowners.

"If he says it looks good, then we'll go ahead with a complete study of the project," Smith said. "We especially want the architect's opinion on the safety factor because it is a little snug to those homes. If he feels it's too close, we'll have to drop the idea."

Some park commissioners not favoring the proposed golf course because of possible hazards to the residential area have called for a second opinion by another golf course expert. Smith said he already has received a letter from one homeowner expressing concern.

First of 7 cleanup projects starts in May

The Palatine Advisory Board is planning seven beautification projects this spring in which civic groups and homeowners' associations will help to clean up and landscape areas of the village.

Glen-Ann Jicha, advisory board chairman, said the projects will include the beautification of main entrances to most subdivisions, beautifying the village train station and areas along the Chicago and North Western Rly. tracks, landscaping along Northwest Highway, and cleaning up neighborhood parks.

The first project, a village-wide cleanup campaign, will begin in May. The other projects will follow and continue into the summer.

Advisory board members will meet this month with fire department, village and legal officials to discuss all aspects of the projects. The advisory board will announce the dates and locations of the projects during a luncheon sometime

ADVISORY BOARD members anticipate the cost of the projects to be $4,000. The board plans to request a portion of the funds from the village board next month. Some of the funds will come out of the board's present $900 budget, Mrs. Jicha said.

"In some cases, the service organizations helping us with these projects will be able to match some of the funds. I'm sure we will receive some financial support from the community," she said.

The ground work for the projects was begun last fall when advisory board members began identifying the village locations that needed upgrading based on suggestions offered by residents in a survey. Board members then toured the village to identify the unsightly areas.

The beautification committee was formed late last year to study the possibility of making parking lots, rights-of-way, meeting places and entrance ways to the village and subdivisions more attractive.

4 trustee candidates to hear facts of library project

John Parsons, Mount Prospect library board president, said he will give independent village board candidates and their workers the facts today on the controversial new $3.2 million library project.

Four of the six independent candidates have accepted Parsons' invitation and will attend a special meeting at the library this morning. Norma Murauskis and Trustee Richard N. Hendricks, who have campaigned on the library issue, are not expected to attend.

Several of the independent candidates have attacked the village board for approving the library without a referendum, and financing the project with bonds issued under home-rule powers. Others also have questioned the need for a new library.

Parsons said many of the accusations were made without facts to back them up. "Nobody is asking. They are just talking," he said, noting that no one has asked him for information on the matter.

CANDIDATES expected to attend today's meeting include Theodore J. Wattenberg, Michael H. Minton, Edward B. Rhen Jr. and Leo Floros.

Parsons said Hendricks already has received the information as a member of the village board. Mrs. Murauskis said she has not had a chance to think about accepting Parsons' invitation.

Parsons said he is confident the library will no longer be a campaign issue once the independent candidates understand what went into the decision.

The invitation for today's meeting was prompted by a meeting earlier this week with workers from the incumbent United Citizens Party. That meeting was requested by campaign manager James P. Grier Jr., who said his workers were running into questions about the library during their campaigning. Grier said he wanted his workers to get "the information from start to finish on the library."

"There have been a lot of rumors flying around and we wanted the truth," Grier said. He said the rumors included charges that the village didn't need a new library and that the present library is adequate.

PARSONS AGREED to the presentation, and then offered the same information to the independents, saying he must remain impartial in the village election.

The library board president said he will explain the history of the need for expanding the library, review alternative ways of expanding, and outline the reasons for the decision. He said he also will discuss why the 2.3-acre Central School property, Central Road and Main Street, was chosen.

The meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the library, 14 E. Busse Ave. Parsons said the meeting is open to residents.

Thefts from autos increase crime rate

Crime figures for the first two months this year in Mount Prospect show a slight increase in crime, due almost entirely to an increase in burglaries from automobiles.

The 239 reported serious crimes this year is an increase of 12, or less than 1 per cent more than the first two months of last year. However, there has been a reduction in other burglaries and thefts this year.

The number of burglaries to residences and businesses totals 49 this year, compared with 52 last year. The number of thefts have declined from 144 to 129. Burglaries of autos went from seven to 24.

Police Chief Ralph J. Doney said he believes the increased apprehensions of burglars and thieves has helped keep the numbers of both crimes down. During February, six burglaries and 18 thefts were cleared through arrests or other means. Sixteen of the cases involved juveniles.

THE NUMBER of vandalism cases increased by three during February, but the 58 incidents were well below the 105 reported in January. A breakdown for the February incidents show 31 acts of vandalism against homes, businesses or property and 27 acts against vehicles.

During February there were two robberies and a murder. All three cases were being cleared through arrests. The murder involved the apparent murder-suicide of Gary and Virginia Zilligen at 7 N. Main St.

The other crimes reported during February were seven batteries, two assaults, six vehicle thefts, one arson, six deceptive practice cases of all types, six sex offenses, two violations of weapon law, five drunken drivers, nine runaways and five violations of the marijuana laws.

VICTORIA STRECKER watched Friday afternoon as authorities carted off 80 of the dogs and cats she had been keeping in her home. Officials said all but five of the dogs, diseased and hairless from unsanitary conditions and from being kept indoors for as long as a year, would be destroyed.

by STIRLING MORITA
and JOHN MAES

Victoria Strecker, 65, had been taking stray dogs and cats into her home for years because she didn't have the heart to turn them away. Friday she wept as county rabies-control officers hauled away more than 80 of them to be destroyed.

Animal-welfare and County Rabies Control workers dragged out about 25 cats, which were kept in homemade cages, and about 50 sickly dogs, many without their fur. The animals were loaded into trucks. Allen Glisch, certified investigator for Rabies Control, said he believed that as many as 95 per cent of the animals would have to be "euthanized."

Mrs. Strecker, while standing outside her refuse-filled back stairway at 8600 Ballard Rd., Maine Township, said she had been keeping dogs and cats for about 16 years. She said she took the animals in because she did not "have the heart" to turn them loose. Some people brought them to her and others just abandoned them on her property.

"I couldn't throw them out," she explained. "I haven't got the heart. I'd rather throw a human being out."

She estimated she spent an average of about $150 a month to take care of the dogs and cats and fed them milk and dried and canned food.

When asked why the dogs were in such poor health, she replied that she did not have much time to take care of the animals because she works during the day as a housemaid. She and her daughter live in the home, which is isolated from nearby apartment buildings. She said her house was licensed with the county as an animal shelter.

THE DOGS AND cats were turned over to the rabies-control department and were being inspected. Glisch said many of them were suffering from wretched conditions caused by poor sanitation. He said the dogs were suffering mostly from neglect and that some had worms and other parasites.

Assistant State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, head of the 3rd Municipal District office, said there were some indications that the dogs had been kept in the home for as long as one year.

Glisch said, "The woman did not intend to be cruel. She wouldn't take them to a vet because he would euthanize them. So she made her self-styled animal shelter."

Sullivan said he did not know if Mrs. (Continued on Page 5)

Ford policy 'best way out': Rumsfeld

by BOB LAHEY

Donald Rumsfeld defended the economic policies of his President and immediate boss Friday night by describing President Ford's proposed tax cut as the best way out of the economic dilemma facing the country.

The former Northwest suburban Congressman and now close adviser to Ford, said the tax cut is "the most rapid way to stimulate the economy."

Rumsfeld declared that an immediate tax cut would "give the people the choice of how to spend their money."

Rumsfeld dodged a question about recent reports that his successor in the U.S. House, Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., had refused to sign a Republican petition vowing support of President Ford. Questioned about Crane's refusal, Rumsfeld replied, "I do not know the details of the position but from what I read, Phil Crane has his reasons and I thought he explained his reasons in an acceptable manner."

CRANE AND U.S. Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., of suburban Flossmoor, were the only two Illinois members of Congress who declined to sign a statement of Republican party solidarity presented by U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., of Rockford. Crane has said he considered it unnecessary to reaffirm his dedication to GOP principals.

Rumsfeld was billed as the star of the Republican Conference Friday at the Regency Hyatt House near O'Hare International Airport, but other GOP luminaries included Percy, Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott, State Comptroller George Lindberg, State Republican Chairman Donald Adams and Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

Although Rumsfeld has been portrayed as Ford's closest adviser, he was reluctant to discuss pending issues Friday night. When asked about President Ford's attitude on foreign aid to the failing Cambodian government, Rumsfeld replied he had not discussed the matter with the President.

Treasure hunt? In the river?

If the Des Plaines IS hiding $40,000, he intends to find it

by LUISA GINNETTI

It's a gamble, but Reinecke thinks he knows where there's a small fortune buried by someone who may have gotten it on payment for an art theft in Chicago perhaps three years ago.

Reinecke, 22, of 1275 Lee St., Des Plaines, believes he found a long-forgotten key to the treasure Friday morning while cleaning out a motel room in the DeVille Motel. And, let's face it — for Jim Reinecke and almost everyone else, $40,000 is worth a gamble.

So, Reinecke and two companions will be digging off the shores of the river in the Forest Preserve east of River Road today at 10 a.m. with the blessing of forest preserve officials, who will be on hand to supervise.

THE KEY IS A LETTER, partially destroyed and browned with age, that describes the location of a buried stronghold that contains $40,000 in small bills. The letter, which included a list of serial numbers for the bills, says the money was payment in connection with the art theft.

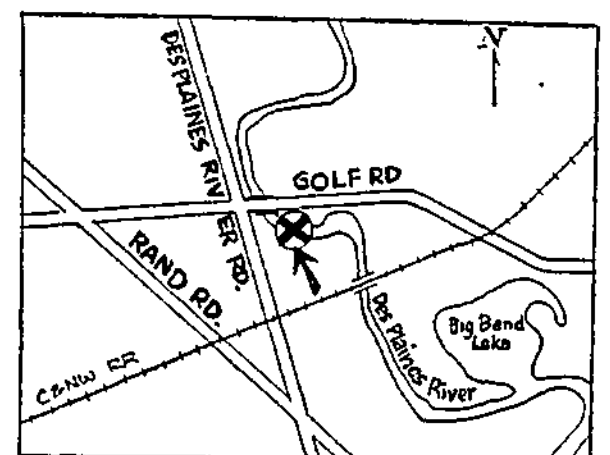

"The top part of the letter was missing, so there was no date on it and I couldn't make out the name at the bottom," Reinecke said. "It caught my attention because of the list of serial numbers on it and it mentioned the location where this guy had buried what sounded like his share of the take."

Reinecke said the letter indicated that the writer had buried the money so he wouldn't be caught with it. "It sounded like the guy was bragging about the case as if he was the mastermind behind it but it didn't mention when the theft took place." He said the name of the Art Institute of Chicago was mentioned in the letter but no specific reference to the date of a possible theft was made.

Reinecke said he burned the letter because he didn't want anyone else to find it. "I have a habit of leaving things around."

He contacted the local FBI office in Des Plaines, where agents said the only recent area art theft they could recall was from a church in Chicago about three years ago.

WHEN REINECKE went to the Des Plaines police to ask their help in locating the money, they said he would have to (Continued on Page 1)

80 diseased animals found in woman's home 'kennel'

FACING AUTHORITIES, Victoria Strecker tells how she dogs and cats she "didn't have the heart" to let go. She turned her basement into a homemade kennel for stray said she had been taking in animals for 16 years.

Strecker would be criminally charged under the cruelty-to-animals statute, but noted that the details of the case would be submitted to a judge on Monday.

WORKERS COVERED their noses as they led the animals from the stench of manure and urine in the basement. The aroma was similar to ammonia.

County authorities were notified of the situation by a furnace repairman who had come to the home a few days earlier. The state's attorney's office took out a search warrant and entered the Strecker home at about 3:30 p.m.

One of the first men on the scene, Guy Johansen of the rabies-control unit, said "I'd never seen anything like it before. When I came into the basement there were dogs all over the place."

A neighborhood youth, Garry Hallington, 15, of 1894 Knight, said he had ventured near the house a few times in the past, but that he was told to leave or he'd be arrested for trespassing.

GLISCH SAID he had seen worse situations in his 31 years of investigating animal welfare.

Mrs. Strecker said that among her dogs were three chihuahuas and five pedigree dogs. "I don't get no money from nobody," she added when asked if anyone helped her pay for feeding the animals.

She kept the dogs in cages when they were in heat, but purchased birth-control pills from a veterinarian to keep them from breeding, Mrs. Strecker said. A wooden shed in back of the house was heated and often used as a kennel, she added.

She also said she would continue to take in dogs and cats though authorities have taken most of them away. Six healthy dogs were returned to Mrs. Strecker.

She cried as she described how she came home shortly after 3:30 p.m. and authorities already had entered the building to take the dogs out.

VIP party officials complain

Schlott rapped for 'politicizing' PTA

by JOE SWICKARD

Village Independents for Progress party officials have charged the husband of a Responsive Citizens Caucus candidate with using his school board position to influence voters and to politicize the PTA.

George Grulke, VIP cochairman, said Richard Schlott, a member of the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education, has written letters to PTA members asking them to "support, and work for Mary Schlott and the entire Responsive Citizens Caucus ticket."

Mrs. Schlott is one of four Caucus candidates running for village trustee in the April 1 municipal election. Her husband was elected to the school board and later resigned but was reappointed to fill a vacancy a few months later.

Grulke said the letters, which he said went to several PTA leaders in the district, represented an effort by Schlott to use his position to influence voters and to politicize the PTA while pushing the candidacy of his wife and her party.

SCHLOTT ACKNOWLEDGED sending the letters and said he viewed them as "a personal letter from me to individuals."

He said he sent out about 100 letters to persons he knew, including members and officials of local PTAs as well as others. He said he came to know the PTA members through his work on the school board.

Schlott denied he was using his position on the board to further his wife's political career. "None whatsoever," he said of possible conflicts of interest or misuse of his position.

One of his letters said, in part, "You and I have worked hard for better schools and for a better community and we've learned the value of having public officials who are capable and responsive to our concerns. . . . On the Responsive Citizens Caucus slate as one of the trustee candidates is my talented friend-by-marriage, Mary Schlott. . . ."

He ended the letter with a request for support for his wife and the rest of the Caucus ticket.

HE SAID HE planned to send more letters when he had time. "I know a lot of people," he said.

Schlott emphasized he was not seeking election to the school board in the April 12 election. "I'll be a former board member then," he said. He likened his position at that point to "other past officials" who make political endorsements.

Grulke disputed Schlott's explanation and said he was "capitalizing" on his position to influence those who come in contact with the Dist. 25 board.

Grulke said Schlott's mailings were an attempt to immerse the PTA in political contests, a situation he said the organization always attempted to avoid in the past.

SCHLOTT SAID he wrote and paid for the letters himself and in no way involved the school board. He said he tried to avoid any conflicts.

"I've tried not to send any (letters) to teachers, but I may have missed in a couple of places," he said.

He said he received no negative comments from his mailings so far. Katherine Muller, Caucus cochairman, said Schlott's mailings were done on his own without the party's knowledge or participation. "I don't know anything about them," Mrs. Muller said.

Resolved after weeks of debate

Schools OK boys' home ec, girls' shop

After weeks of debate, the Arlington Heights Dist. 25 Board of Education approved a proposal which will make home economics for boys and shop classes for girls mandatory in district junior high schools.

The proposal, originally proposed by a teacher-administration committee last month, will take effect in September. It calls for "block subjects" of art, music, home economics and industrial arts to be taught in nine-week sections. On the eighth-grade level, students may opt to "specialize" in a particular area of interest.

Eighth-grade students may take home economics and shop or may decide to take two courses during the year in their area of interest, for example, two music classes along with art and home economics.

Each junior high school will begin the new programs in September. Coeducational industrial arts and home economics classes will begin for the sixth grade in 1975-76, the seventh grade in 1976-77 and the eighth grade in 1977-78.

THE PROPOSAL is aimed at broadening opportunity for junior high school students, and A. Todd Fouty, director of special services. "Now we're talking about students, rather than 'boys and girls.'"

The changes allow the district to follow new federal guidelines calling for equal education opportunities regardless of sex.

Under the new setup, subjects would be "introductory and exploratory at the sixth-grade level," Fouty said. Seventh-and eighth-grade courses would build upon this basic introduction and place primary stress upon the development of individual interests and talents, he said.

Under the present system, students in district junior high schools took three, 13-week courses in art, music and industrial arts or home economics.

The board had asked the committee making the proposals to study the possibility of somehow retaining the 13-week courses. However the committee reported that such a plan was not feasible with present staff and facility limitations.

Course on 'effective parenting' offered

"Tots through Teens" a course in effective parenting, will be offered at St. James Resource Center, 821 N. Arlington Heights Rd., April 10 through May 8.

The course, which will meet Thursdays from 9:15 to 11:30 a.m., will be based on Dr. Thomas Gordon's "Parent Effectiveness Training." Karen Martin, coordinator for preschool and primary education at St. James, will lead discussions along with Kathy Schwarz and Barbara Cann, both mothers of children under 13.

The class size will be limited to 20 persons. The fee is $5 for the series with babysitting available at $1. Registration may be made by calling 394-3698.

Seminar for election law judges Wednesday

More than 150 judges in the April 1 village and park district elections are expected to attend a special two hour class on election law Wednesday.

The school for election judges will be taught by Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel and an official of the Illinois Board of Elections. The class will be from 10 a.m. to noon at Pioneer Park fieldhouse, 500 S. Fernandez Ave.

Coronets color guard show

The Coronets color guard and drill team of Arlington Heights will host a color guard show Sunday at the Arlington High School gym.

The competition, featuring 15 teams from Illinois, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Ohio, will start at 1 p.m.

Tickets will be on sale at the door. Admission is 75 cents for children and $1.50 for adults.
